Wanted, Better Strikes
The Oldest Alligator
Forcing a Confession
War on Buffalo Gnats

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IT IS good news that railroads and employes have arranged their differences, particularly good news that workers will have restored the 10 per cent cut in wages. It will be done slowly, in three advances, beginning July 1, but better slowly than never.

Railroad unions, including in their membership the finest type of American citizenship, sober, careful, patient, industrious conductors, engineers and others, set a good example to labor in their patience and unwillingness to delay return of prosperity.

Railroads, perhaps the greatest of sufferers from the depression, fortunately find conditions improving. In March, 1934, they took in more than $10,000,000 as against $5,500,000 in March last year. For the first quarter of this year the net operating income was $65,000,000 as against $17,000,000 a year ago.

Cleveland, with a strike of gasoline salesmen and a taxicab strike, may be compelled to "get a horse."

Steel workers strike in Birmingham, trained nurses in Chicago, automobile workers leave their jobs for assorted reasons at a time when employers might sell cars. Alabama coal mines have concluded one strike that made 21,000 idle and threatened idleness for thousands more.

Could not workmen find a way to fight each other and their employers without necessarily fighting the public? If the public possessed intelligence, it would enforce some such system. Unfortunately, intelligence in its own protection seems to be one thing of which the public has none.

St. Augustine, Fla., exhibits an alligator named "Old Ponce" that seems to have found the spring that Ponce De Leon was looking for. He is about 900 years old, and was 500 years old when Florida was discovered by Ponce De Leon.

"Old Ponce" sits quietly, showing no signs of life until food comes. Then he is as vigorous and youthful as his youngest great-great-great alligator grandson, fifty times removed. He weighs 1200 pounds and eats 75 pounds of meat at one meal.

Except for the difference in age, he is not unlike certain prosperous gentlemen that live at Palm Beach or Newport, have yachts and private cars, and imagine they really amount to something as they eat, drink and produce nothing.

Jerry Williams and Willy Holzendorf, Negroes, were accused of sending a letter of extortion to L. L. Stuckey, mayor of Pahokee, Fla., and this, according to Mayor Stuckey, is his method of extracting the truth from Williams, whom he now believes innocent.

First, the mayor and friends took Williams to an Everglades swamp, where a shallow grave had been dug. They stripped him naked, made him get into the grave, pointed revolvers at him, told him he had one minute to live unless he told the truth. Williams repeated his story that a white man had given him the letter to mail to Mayor Stuckey.

Williams was then taken to the West Palm Beach sheriff's office and there, in the presence of deputy sheriffs and a representative of the United States Department of Justice, Williams "was placed in a chair wired so as to give a slight shock, good for anybody, to the person sitting in the chair." The "good old anybody" is a pleasant touch.

Mayor Stuckey says Williams thought he was being electrocuted. And was so frightened he "changed color from black to ashen, but still refused to change his original story." Mayor Stuckey told Judge Ritter of the federal court that he believed Williams was telling the truth, because he really thought he was about to be killed.

Judge Ritter expressed disapproval of these energetic, ingenious methods of compelling an innocent man to confess guilt. Many will wonder what would happen if a group of Negroes should do to a white man what these white men did to the Negro Williams.

A suit for financial damages that might be profitable is probably the only satisfaction that the tortured Negro can expect.

Daylight Saving Here, Fix Clocks

Daylight saving time is with us again!

Set your clocks forward one hour before you go to bed tonight.

Please don't argue. It is ahead, not backward.

At 2 o'clock tomorrow morning it will be 3 o'clock Eastern Daylight Saving Time.

Railroads plan to adjust time schedules, so it might be a good idea to get a new timetable.

U.S. Loans to Industry Bill Approved

By Associated Press.

Washington, April 28—Legislation estimated to provide $280,000,000 for loans by Federal Reserve Banks to private industry was approved today by the Senate banking committee.

The bill, offered by Senator Glass (D-Va.), was approved by President Roosevelt, Eugene Black, governor of the federal reserve board, and Secretary Morgenthau.

The Glass plan represents a compromise between original proposals by the reserve board for creation of a system of twelve credit banks in the reserve bank districts and the bill offered by the Virginia senator for direct loans through the banks.

Under the approved bill, reserve banks would be authorized to make five-year loans to industry, either dirct in extraordinary cases, or through financial institutions with the latter bearing 20 per cent of the risk.

The committee approved the bill as agreed upon by Black and Glass at a final conference yesterday. This contained several changes, however, from the form in which the bill was offered by Glass two weeks ago.

The total amount of such loans to industry would be limited to the combined surplus of the Federal Reserve banks, which is now about $140,000,000.

The bill provides for direct loans to "an established industrial or commercial business," when a Federal Reserve bank finds such a business in its district "is unable to obtain requisite financial assistance on a reasonable basis from the usual sources."

BRAVES TIED WITH N. Y. IN 4TH

By JOE CASHMAN

Braves Field, April 28—With Carl Hubbell and Ed Brandt, the greatest of National League southpaws, as the opposing pitchers, the Braves and the world's champion New York Giants opened an abbreviated two-game series here this afternoon.

A crowd of 3500 shivered in a raw west wind to watch the duel of the port-side aces.

The Braves, with four straight wins to their credit and undefeated at home this season, could take second place from the Terrymen by making a clean sweep of the series.

FIRST INNING

Giants—J. Moore grounded out to Jordan. Ryan flied to Berger. Terry bunted and was thrown out by Brandt. NO RUNS.

Braves—Urbanski flied to Ott. McManus flied to J. oMore. Jackson threw out Jordan. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING

Giants—Ott popped to Jordan. Jackson was safe when Urbanski fumbled. Leiber singled to left. Vergez flied to Mowry. Richards grounded out to Jordan. NO RUNS.

Braves—Hubbell threw out Berger. Whitney doubled against the center field wall. Lee walked. Mowry fanned. Hogan popped to Vergez. NO RUNS.

RHODES HURLS FOR RED SOX

By BILL GRIMES

New York, April 30—The Red Sox and Yankees went into action this afternoon before a gathering of 10,000. The weather was chilly and a northwest wind swept across the stadium.

"Dusty" Rhodes was Manager Harris' selection for mound duty, while Rus Vanatta drew the starting hilltop assignment for the Yankees.

Owner Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox was at the game.

FIRST INNING

Red Sox—Bishop singled to right. Werber flied to Chapman. Lazzeri speared Morgan's line drive with his glove hand and then doubled Bishop at first. NO RUNS.

Yankees—Crosetti fouled to Walters. Combs flied to Reynolds in deep center. Ruth walked. Bishop tossed out Gehrig. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING

Red Sox—Johnson went out, Heffner to Gehrig. Reynolds singled to right. Solters fouled to Lazzeri. Ferrell fouled to Gehrig. NO RUNS.

Yankees—Chapman walked. Lazzeri fouled to Walters. Dickey hit to Werber who touched second, forcing Chapman, then doubled Dickey at first. NO RUNS.

MILLEN MAY SEE BRIDE AT TESTS

Pictures on Pages 3 and 5

By WIN BROOKS

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Dedham Courthouse, April 28—Murton Millen and his counsel were hopefully fighting late this afternoon for permission for the accused bridegroom to be present, in Dedham jail tomorrow, when his bride, Norma, undergoes questioning about her married life.

Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing had ruled earlier today that Norma and her husband could not meet. A week ago they had an emotional meeting of 90 minutes in the rotunda of the jail.

Late today the district attorney indicated over the telephone that he might reconsider and permit them to meet when she is questioned by psychiatrists.

Doctors visited the Millen brothers, Murton and Irving, in their cells at the jail today.

BALK PART OF TEST

These men of science are preparing material that will play an important part in the defense.

It was reported this afternoon that the Millens refused flatly to subject themselves to a test of spinal fluid. Other tests ,it is understood, they underwent without objections.

Tomorrow morning, if present plans are not changed, Norma will walk into the rotunda of the jail and will subject herself to questioning.

In preparation for today's tests the Millens had been given no breakfast and were kept relaxing on their cots until the doctors visited them.

Three doctors moved into the jail soon after 10 o'clock this morning, taking with them intricate laboratory apparatus which was set up with scientific machines placed in the jail last night. The Millens, much to their dismay, had been kept in their cell cots relaxing and on orders of their counsel had been given no breakfast.

Faber, their co-defendant, spooned a large bowl of mush.

The brothers underwent a physical examination and then were conducted to the shower room by their guards. There they were given basal metabolism tests on the machine which looks like a cross between a tire pump and a butter churn with a bit of automobile motor tossed in. This machine has

Taxi War, Strike Looming Here

Rumbles of a taxi war in Boston were heard today and it was learned that a meeting which may result in a strike vote, has been called for tomorrow for drivers employed by one of the largest companies.

Although greatest secrecy is being maintained, it was learned that the meeting will be held in a South End hall and that an organizer, who was connected with the taxi strike in New York, will be one of the speakers.

2 IN CANADA ON CAHILL CLUE

Lieut. Daniel O'Connell of Somerville and a representative of the district attorney have been rushed to Canada, it was revealed today, on a new clue to the whereabouts of Harry P. Cahill, sought since September in the slaying of Margaret "Peggy" McCarthy, 10.

Details as to the nature of the clue or the whereabouts of the two investigators were kept secret by Chief Thomas Damery. He did admit that someone in Canada who had seen a circular sent out on Cahill, had reported seeing a man there some time ago who resembled the fugitive.

As a result, the chief said that he considered the information worth investigating and ordered O'Connell and the district attorney aid to the northern country. No word has as yet been received from them, however.

Washington, April 28—Today's treasury balance, $4,333,584,592. U. S. customs receipts, $18,261,089.

10-DAY WAIT FOR RETURN IS EDICT OF GANG

Tucson, Ariz., April 28 (INS)—Six-year-old June Robles, now in the hands of kidnapers for nearly 72 hours, may not be returned to her parents for ten days.

It was learned from a high police authority that the kidnapers agreed through an intermediary to free the child at the "first opportunity," and not later than ten days.

Little June's confidently expected return last night was believed to have been blocked by crowds of curious thronging the streets of Tucson and the activity of officers in continuing to check telephone tips.

Fernando Robles, grief stricken father of the kidnaped child, today begged the citizens of this city to give his child a chance to return.

"We beseech friends and those sympathizing with us to keep away from our home," said his appeal, "and not to gather on nearby streets. The police have reassured us that they will suspend all activities."

In the minds of the parents was the fear, too, that the child may have been slain.

Highlights of today's developments were:

1. Ransom payment, reported made last night, believed to have been less than $10,000, being followed by burning of signal flare on mountain top.
2. Bernabe Robles, girl's grandfather, reported attempting to contact kidnapers again to learn how he can help return little June at once.
3. Governor B. B. Moeur personally studies record of case to determine best policy for state highway patrol to follow after June Robles is returned safely.
4. Department of Justice agents announce in Los Angeles they have been ordered to drop all activity in connection with case to permit safe return of child.
5. Police cars continue vigilance over mountain area.
6. Strict silence enjoined on all connected with the case.

PARENTS NEAR COLLAPSE

Sixty hours have passed since June was "snatched" by an ill-dressed man from in front of her schoolhouse, Wednesday afternoon.

Lights burned throughout the night at the home of June's parents, Mr. and Mrs Fernando Robles, as the father and mother were near a nervous collapse.

Several suspects were taken into custody here also but after investigations, were released. The police of Tucson, who rounded up the Dillinger gang, admitted they were without definite clues.

FISH SCHOONER IN DISTRESS

The fishing schooner John Killigrew, out of New Bedford, sent a distress call to coast guard headquarters today, reporting that she was in trouble off Nantucket Lightship with her engines out of commission.

A patrol boat was ordered out of Woods Hole to proceed to her assistance.

DILLINGER PLOT TO KIDNAP OHIO GOVERNOR BARED

GOV. WHITE'S DAUGTHER IS TARGET OF GANG ALSO

Chase For Bandit Throughout Nation Turns to East on Information From Binghamton, N. Y.

BULLETIN

Massachusetts state police today joined police of a dozen states in the hunt for John Dillinger and his quick-trigger band of desperadoes and slayers. Following reports that Dillinger and his band were seen in Binghamton, N. Y., and were headed east in several automobiles, the Massachusetts troopers kept a close watch on roads from New York crossing the western borders of this state.

State police received the following teletype message from New York:

"Look out for two cars containing six men and three women. Both cars contain firearms. One car bears Illinois license plates. The other has Wisconsin plates."

Columbus, O., April 28 (AP)—Governor George White of Ohio has received supposed "inside information" that members of the John Dillinger gang have established a "headquarters" here with the view to perfecting plans to kidnap the executive and his daughter, Mary.

The governor declined to disclose the source of his information, which was to the effect that several members of the Dillinger gang had reached Columbus and were merely awaiting a favorable moment to act.

Only 11 days ago, the governor received a letter mailed from Chicago containing a threat that he would not live to the end of his term of office unless he pardoned Harry Pierpont, Charles Markley and Russell Clark, three members of the Dillinger mob now held in Ohio Penitentiary.

The latest Dillinger information, it was disclosed, was not a threat but was in the nature of an "inside tip," that the Dillinger mobsters had surveyed the situation here.

Pierpont and Markley are to be electrocuted on July 13 for the murder at Lima last October 12 of Sheriff Jess Sarber. Clark is serving a life sentence for that murder, committed when members of Dillinger's gang made a successful raid on the jail and freed their leader while he was held as a suspected bank robber.

Binghamton, N. Y., Reports Seeing Dillinger Gang in Car There

By Associated Press

Binghamton, N. Y., April 28—A report that John Dillinger, object of America's massed man hunt, and several members of his mob were in Binghamton last night stirred police and sheriff's deputies into activity today. Representatives of the sheriff's office undertook an immediate pursuit, but no trace of the suspect was found.

A chiropractor named McCann reported to police at 11:10 that two automobiles, one bearing Illinois and the other Wisconsin plates, and carrying six men and three women, stopped in front of the Marquette Hotel. The cars were headed east, and drew up on the wrong side of the street at the hotel. One of the men motioned to a hotel employe, and ordered drinks for four of the party. After paying for the liquor the party drove away quickly.

McCann's suspicions were aroused. He told the police he saw in the automobiles what looked like sawed-off shotguns, and he thought the motorists were Dillinger and his gang. He said he was not able to get the registration number on the Illinois car but that the plates on the Wisconsin car bore number 10649.

Police headquarters immediately broadcast a notice to police cars telling them to watch out for the party. The information was also conveyed to the State constabulary, and the sheriff's office was notified. Sheriff's deputies failed in a drive as far as the Pennsylvania border to disclose any trace.

Dillinger Gang Converging on St. Paul for Council of War

Milwaukee, April 28 (AP)—The fugitive John Dillinger gang was thought today to be converging on St. Paul, for a council of war.

Officials believed that Tommy Carroll, reported in a un battle near Solon Springs last night, and George (Baby Face) Nelson, who ran a police gauntlet near Lac Du Flambeau, were doing their utmost to get through to St. Paul. The car in which Carroll was riding was headed in that direction.

That Nelson and Carroll were not riding together at the time of the solon springs affray appeared plausible.

Nelson was alone in the shack of a lac du flambeau Indian for two days prior to his flight Thursday night. During the time he had no means of contact with Carroll who has been making his own fight for freedom from the dragnet out for the Dillinger mob. Carroll apparently took refuge in an adjoining county after the little Bohemia escape Sunday.

Somewhere southeast of Ashland Carroll is believed to have stolen the car fired on last night.

When Nelson made his break at Lac du Flambeau he apparently sped south to avoid the heavily guarded woodland area and reach the Central Wisconsin route to St. Paul via Marshfield.

Reports that Dillinger was in the East weres coffed at by authorities today, who believed him unable to break through the heavy middle western patrol.

Trap Set for "Baby Face," Dillinger Aid

By Universal Service.

Chicago, April 28—Dillinger is here!

This word flashed today sent squads of police to the Gold Coast with machine guns, tear gas, bullet-proof vests and aluminum bullet shields in the hope of killing or capturing John Dillinger.

The hurried action was futile. Their quarry escaped, probably a fake alarm.

This scene was duplicated upon a dozen fronts in the Midwest today, with squad cars and screeching sirens sounding the alarms of Dillinger being seen in numerous places.

Hurried calls for armed action gave trigger fingers of thousands of police an extra twitch. Federal and state officers breathed the fervent hope that they could kill or capture the outlaw chieftain and end the suspense to which they have been subjected.

Homer Van Meter, Dillinger benchman, was identified as one of five bank robbers at Villa Park, Ill., today.

Border-line action in Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin was combined with the defenses set up at St. Paul where it was reported George ("Baby Face") Nelson was expected, following his escape from the wooded Wisconsin area early today.

Nelson, slayer of Federal Agent W. C. Baum in the Spider Lake shooting fiasco last Sunday when the entire Dillinger gang escaped, except for three girls, dashed to freedom by forcing an Indian to lead him through the woods to a highway where he stole a car and drove toward St. Paul.

Dillinger Is in a Crystal Ball

Chicago, April 28 (AP)—"Dillinger cornered in a north side apartment."

Police paused only long enough to gather their riot equipment. The flat was stormed. Detectives, weapons bared, burst in.

"Where?" shouted the agitated detectives.

"There," said a distressed woman, pointing to a crystal ball, "I saw him clearly."

Minneapolis—Because Minneapolis magicians consider him "the greatest escape artist of all time," John Dillinger has been made an "unhonorary members" of the Mystic 13, League of Magicians.

All he has to do to get his card is to call at the office of Chief of Police Michael Johanes, to whom the card will be presented by officers of the league.

Washington, April 27—Reward of $25,000 for the capture, dead or alive, of John Dillinger was approved by the House judiciary committee today.

Under the bill, not only Dillinger but every "public enemy" would be hunted with a $25,000 price on his head.

Chicago—A man said to be John Dillinger, appearing ill, was reported riding in an automobile with two other men on Washington boulevard today. The report was given police by a man who said he saw Dillinger several times in jail at Crown Point, Ind., before he escaped with a wooden pistol.

Joliet, Ill.—Three bandits today held up the People's Loan and Homestead bank here and escaped with $6000. They escaped in an automobile bearing Wisconsin license plates. This led police to investigate the possibility that they were members of Dillinger's gang.

Best Dog in Common Show

OLIVE CARRIG BESSIE

Chosen as the best dog in the show sponsored by youngsters on Boston Common today was Bessie, an English setter bitch, owned by Olive Carrig, of 397 Belmont st., Belmont. Her proud owner is shown with blue ribbon. Fittingly enough, the Common show was restricted to common, unpedigreed dogs. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Prefers Pipe to Pedigree

One of the biggest attractions at today's Dog Show on the Common—sponsored by youngsters strictly for dogs without pedigree—was Helen Bohlman's Big Boy. "So long as I have my pipe," he barked, "I should worry about pedigrees and blue ribbons!" His little mistress lives in Chilton st., Belmont. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Children, Rich and Poor, Hold Boston Dog Show

A children's dog show was held today on Boston Common and class distinction was taboo.

For four hours society children, with their pedigreed dogs, hobnobbed with youngsters from the sand lots, who had come with their pet mongrels.

It was a children's dog show, planned and carried out by two little girls, Miss Mary Carraher and Janet Hyde, both 10 years old, of Belmont.

The only adults who took any part in the affair were two policemen. They had been assigned to protect the children and Mrs. Roger O'Brien, the show judge.

The winners were:

Boston terrier: "Beadeye," owned by Francis Lathrop, 6 Beacon st.; second, "Peggy," owned by Dorothy Bohlman, Chilton st., Belmont; third, "Buddy," owned by Victor Notara, 54 South Margin st., West End.

Pekinese: "Chang," owned by Dorothy Clark, Dorset rd., Waban; second, "Susan," owned by Barbara Ware, Lexington; third, "Mingtoy," owned by Winifred Guarente, Dean rd., Brookline.

Scotch terrier: "Pal", owned by Elizabeth Moseley, Imrie rd., Allston; second, "Pan", owned by Stewart MacLaren, School st., Belmont; third, "Nifty", owned by Edward Lynch, Wrentham st., Dorchester; honorable mention, "Major", owned by John Cassford, Dorchester st., South Boston.

Best dog: "Bessie", owned by Olive Carrig, Belmont st., Belmont.

French poodle: "Monsieur Beaucaire", owned by Harry Paris, Framingham.

Mongrel: "Rex", owned by Janet Hyde, Belmont.

GEOGEN GUILTY IN ABDUCTION

Leominster, April 28—Alfred "Buster" Geogen, 23, amateur boxer and wrestler, today pleaded guilty in district court to the charge of abducting Mary Marsh, 16, of Merriam ave. He was sentenced to six months by Judge Robbins.

Sentence was suspended until May, 1935. Meanwhile Geogen will be under the jurisdiction of a probation officer.

Edward Berent of Milford, arrested with Geogen in connection with the girl's abduction, pleaded not guilty. His case was dismissed for lack of prosecution.

According to Police Chief John Meade of Leominster, Geogen enticed the girl to leave her home on April 18. The athlete, according to the chief, promised to take the girl to Texas on a theatrical engagement, and proposed marriage to her.

When the girl's parents reported her missing, police finally located the couple in Hudson.

TWO SEIZED IN BREMER PLOT

By Associated Press

Chicago, April 28—John J. "Boss" McLaughlin, politician, was arrested last night on a suppressed warrant charging conspiracy in possessing part of the Edward Bremer $200,000 ransom.

McLaughlin was named in warrants issued after the arrest yesterday of William E. Vidler, on whom officers found $2665 of the fortune paid the kidnapers of the St. Paul man several months ago.

McLaughlin's son, John J., Jr., was taken into custody on the board of trade floor today by federal agents.

The leder McLaughlin told federal men his son, who is 17 years old, kept a safety deposit box, and the son, an employe of a grain company, was detained on the theory the missing money might be found in the box.

LYNN POLICE TO FACE QUIZ

Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn today ordered a police investigation into charges made by a woman in that city that two reserve policemen, recently appointed, had paid politicians for their jobs and that the same officials had accepted money to get liquor licenses.

Acting Police Chief Edward D. Callahan questioned the two policemen. They denied they had paid $500 and $350, respectively, for their appointments. Liquor dealers were to be quizzed as to whether or not they were forced to pay to get their licenses put through.

The woman included the charges in a letter she wrote to the mayor. She was questioned and admitted that she had had a row with a city councillor over an ERA job.

MRS. SHARKEY UNDER KNIFE

Mrs. Jack Sharkey, wife of the former heavyweight champion of the world, was operated on at the Phillips House this morning.

Mrs. Sharkey has not been in the best of health for the past year, and the doctors decided an operation would be helpful to her condition. It is expected that Mrs. Sharkey will be at the Phillips House for at least two weeks.

It was stated by the hospital authorities that Mrs. Sharkey was in good condition when she entered the hospital last night, and it is expected that she will have a rapid recovery.

Mrs. Sharkey and the former champion have three children, Jack, Jr., Dorothy and Marilyn. The children are being cared for by Mrs. Sharkey's grandmother, Mrs. William Pike, at their Newton home at No. 10 Stone avenue.

The Sharkey's were married shortly after the former champion started his career as a boxer.

This is the second time Mrs. Sharkey has gone under the knife. She was operated upon in New York, shortly before Sharkey's bout with Jack Dempsey.

Commander Hayes of Legion Recovers

Newington, Ct., April 28 (AP)—Edward A. Hayes, national commander of the American Legion, remained at the Veterans' Hospital here today, recovering from exhaustion that interrupted his Connecticut tour. Physicians said he would be sufficiently rested to leave tomorrow for Washington, D. C., to attend a meeting of the Legion rehabilitation committee.

NO. ADAMS CLUE TO GIRL SLAYING

North Adams, April 28—New and important information, received in strict secrecy by police, has resulted in re-opening investigation of the mysterious slaying, exactly a year ago, of 18-year-old Leah Lloyd Johnston, it was learned today.

The girl, believed to have been on her way to a love tryst, was stabbed and choked to death by a brutal assailant. Her body, with a shoe string knotted around the neck and a man's handkerchief jammed down the throat, was found in a field in the outskirts of the town, April 29, 1933.

Although several alleged acquaintances of the victim were questioned, no arrests were made on the murder charge.

Most recent story to be brought to the authorities was that of a witness who told of seeing Miss Johnston with another young woman and two men at Witt's Lodge, North Adams, a few hours before the killing.

Witt's Lodge, according to police, was at that time a hangout for hoboes.

The name of the witness who, after a year, decided to tell his story, is being withheld today by Chief of Police Michael Conlon and State Detective Silas P. Smith, in charge of the investigation.

At least one person never previously under suspicion was being sought today for questioning.

Drowning Accidental

St. Johnsbury, Vt., April 28 (AP)—Police said today that August W. Buckingham of Utica, N. Y., whose body was washed ashore in Passumpsic river, met death by accidental drowning in a fall from a bridge while taking a short cut home. Buckingham had been missing since October.

Dillinger Sweetheart Pleads for His Life

Indian Girl Sobs Belief in His Innocence

St. Paul, Minn., April 28—Crying for the life of her lover marked for death on sight, Evelyn Frechette, black-eyed girl of part Indian blood, sat in her sombre cell today, pleading for "justice" for herself and John Dillinger.

Told that the nation's countless officers of the law grimly waited with guns cocked for even a glimpse of the phantom gunman, Miss Frechette sobbed:

"He cannot be as bad as they say he is, for I myself know that anybody who has been as kind and true to me during the year that I have known him, cannot be guilty of the things that they accuse him of."

"HE IS MY MAN"

Dillinger, rated as the nation's hardest outlaw, is just a plain sweetheart to this girl, just a few years out of a government Indian school.

"He is my man," she said confidently. "If I could be with him now I know that I would be in his arms. And just as soon as I can convince them that I have done nothing wrong and am free, I will flee to him, regardless of where he may be.

"OH, DON'T KILL HIM"

"They mustn't kill him. It is not right that they should take his life like that. He will see or hear what I am saying, and he will give himself up if given half a chance. I know I cannot prevent what they may do to him after they catch him, but they must not kill him in cold blood."

Thus, the frightened young woman, harassed by thoughts that she might never see alive the man who courted her for more than a year, concluded the first extended interview permitted since her incarceration in the county jail here on charges of harboring a criminal.

Miss Frechette, slender and pretty, talked freely and frankly about her early life, her girlhood on the reservation and in the government Indian school at Flandreau, S. D. But of the events following her friendship with Dillinger she kept a steadfast silence.

She preferred to talk about the life on the Menomonie Indian reservation. Her father, now dead, was a Frenchman and her mother, now remarried, was a half-breed.

"There is not much opportunity for schooling on the reservation and when I was 13 years old I went to the Indian school at Flandreau, S. D., where I studied in the upper grades for four years. That was about eight years ago when I left there.

"I returned to the reservation and lived with my mother but was gone much of the time, working in the homes and stores in the nearby towns."

TEXT OF TOKIO STATEMENT ON CHINA BARED

Claims Sole Right to Preserve Peace in Far East

Toyko, April 28 (INS)—The newspaper Nichi Nichi announced tonight that it has obtained a copy of the original statement regarding Japan's position concerning China which Foreign Minister Koki Hirota plans to forward to interested nations on Monday. According to Nichi Nichi the foreign minister's statement says:

"The world must not forget for a moment that Japan assumes responsibility for the maintenance of peace in the Orient. Japan is the only stabilizing factor in the Orient.

CONFIDENT AS TO U. S.

"I am confident that the United States will not fail to acknowledge Japan's position as it shoulders the heavy responsibility, but Japan is determined to preserve the Far Eatsern peace.

"I have the pleasure of making the assertion that Japan has no intention of offering the slightest interference in China's territorial integrity or its legitimate interests. On the contrary, we desire that China accomplish national unification in order to bring about her prosperity.

"Regarding Manchukuo, Japan desired the powers to recognize her freedom of action. Japan does not entertain any desire to acquire territory in that area. Japan's geographical position is such that it will reap a benefit when China becomes a united Nation.

"Her unification and prosperity, however, must be earned by dint of her own labor and can never be accomplished by other nations seeking to acquire her interests for themselves.

"NO THIRD PARTY"

"Japan will not approve interference in China by a third party. If the powers wish to promote Chinese commerce then we will welcome them.

"Japan does not withhold her participating in existing treaties by which the signatories are pledged to the open door, or equal opportunity in China. Japan is opposed to the actions of countries which result in disturbances, whatever excuses those powers may have.

"Japan shares with others in the Far East the responsibility to maintain order, and especially counts upon China to cooperate when, as in times past, other powers and the League of Nations take advantage of China's regrettable condition to pursue selfish interests in that country."

TRIO IS NABBED IN CAR THEFT

Football training of two Phillips Academy, Andover, students, was responsible today for the appearance in Lawrence Court of two Worcester men and a Haverhill youth for misappropriation of an automobile.

The arrested trio are: John F. Manning, of Temple st., Haverhill, Francis F. Ribideau, Pleasant st., Worcester and Ernest Hanson, of Plantation st., Worcester. They pleaded not guilty and the case was continued one week.

The students whose flying tackles brought about the arrests were John M. Weaver and Daniel Knapp, both seniors.

According to the police Sergt. Frank Saunders, of the Andover police, had been watching for the car reported stolen in Haverhill and as it appeared in view he gave chase and ordered the men to stop.

The three men leaped from the car and attempted to escape across the campus of Andover Academy and the two students joined the police in the chase.

BURNHAM WILL AIDS CHARITY

Public bequests of $35,000 were contained in the will of the late Mary T. Burnham of Brookline, filed today for probate at Dedham.

The will provided $5000 bequests each for the Methodist, Universalist and Congregational churches of Essex. Similar bequests were given the town of Essex, the Taylor Library of Essex and the Congregational Church, Derry, N. H.

A bequest of $25,000 is made to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stanley of Woburn, and a similar bequest to a cousin, Mrs. Alice Wheat of Nashua, N. H. The residue of the estate is divided between the Home for Aged Women of Boston, the Family Welfare Society of Boston and the House of the Good Samaritan, also of Boston.

ENGLAND SAFE FROM FASCISTS FOR 2 YEARS

Knickerbocker Tells of Security in Post-War History

Editor's note—Fascism will not come in England for another two years if ever, H. R. Knickerbocker writes in the sixth and last chapter of his series on the British Blackshirts. England, Knickerbocker points out, has not experienced the same conditions that led to the establishment of Fascist government in Italy and Germany.

London, April 28—Will Britain go Fascist? Will it submit to terror? Terror is the method of real Fascism. The reason why the dictates of Mussolini and Hitler are carried out without any opposition is because in the last analysis castor oil and concentration camp await any opponent.

Planned national economy and the desire to attain it is another thing. It is the one element common to Russian Bolsheviks, German Nazis, Italian Fascists, Mosley Blackshirts, Morrison Laborites, Elliott Conservatives, and Roosevelt Democrats.

Fascists and Bolsheviks unite in declaring they can attain their plans only through terror. Others believe they can attain their plans through persuasion and democracy. On the decision whether terror is necessary, whether it will win in Britain depend the liberties not only of this country, but perhaps to our own.

POSITIVE ANSWER

For the short run one can venture a positive answer to the question, "Will Britain go Terrorist-Fascist?" the ansewr is "no, not at least within two years."

For the long run it is only possible to judge Britain by the example of those countries which have gone Fascist. Rule out in the first place the natural British assumption that Britons are "different from Germans and Italians." If the history of post-war Europe has taught anything it has taught that the elemental forces moulding mankind attack each nation with impartial violence and that given the same conditions Italians and Germans and Frenchmen and Britons will react so nearly the same way as makes no matter.

But what were the conditions that brought about Fascism in Germany and Italy? What were the conditions that obtained in the two countries that do not obtain today in Britain? In other words, what are the arguments against Britain going Fascist?

FEELING IS CITED

Perhaps of paramount importance was the fact that in both Germany and Italy there was a national feeling of inferiority. There was a national disgrace to wipe out. Germany lost the war. She felt she had to wipe that off the record. Hitler has persuaded Germany today that she won the war.

Italy nominally was a victor, but the shame of the Italian rout at Caporetto was, until Mussolini came to power, in the back of every Italian mind. The populace spat upon Italian officers. The flag was a rag. Mussolini taught Italy to hold its head up. Above all, Fascism in both countries restored the national pride.

England has no disgrace to wipe out. Her output of national pride is the largest industry.

4 Students Hurt as Car Hits Tree

South Deerfield, April 28 (AP)—Four young men, believed to be students at Massachusetts State College, were injured early today when their automobile left the road, crashed into a tree and then into a bridge.

The four gave their names as Joseph Lojko, 21, of Northampton; Walter Salvo, 24, of New York city; William W. Talman, 19, of Birmingham, Mich., and Graham Beckel, 21, of Huntington, Pa.

O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

New York, April 28—The palaver turned to coincidence. And I related this. During the Chicago World's Fair my father registered at the Great Northern from his home town, Plattsburgh, Mo. He noticed immediately above his signature that of "E. C. Hall, Plattsburgh," a gentleman my father knew.

O. O. McIntyre

In his room, he phoned to Mr. Hall. A voice he did not recognize said he was Mr. Hall. Father explained who he was and exchanged salutations of the day. The Mr. Hall was courteous but vague. He did not recall knowing an H. B. McIntyre. "You are E. C. Hall, the lawyer from Plattsburgh?" my father inquired.

The response was affirmative. My father explained again who he was. Still there was indecision, so my father inquired: "Let me get this right, you are E. C. Hall, the lawyer from Plattsburgh in Clinton County?" The gentleman replied he was and would come to my father's room.

They met and were perfect strangers. The comedy of errors had resulted from the fact that not once had the state of Missouri been mentioned. The bewildered gentleman was E. C. Hall, a lawyer from Plattsburgh, which is in Clinton County, New York. A further coincidence, as I recall, was that both had been mayors of their cities.

At the Gerdes in Cincinnati, a rendezvous for visiting ball teams and vaudeville folk, there was a blundering good humored bus-boy the crowd at our newspaper table called, somewhat cruelly, "Stewp," a shortening of Stupid. Despite giggles at his comicalities of syntax, he never forgot to be courteous, won a place in our affections and, as bus-boys do, passed out of our ken. In Cologne, 20 years later, I arrived by motor one night at the Dome Hotel. It seemed to my wife and me we were attended with unusual graciousness all the next day and until the next noon. The manager in a cutaway escorted us to the car on departing, presenting a beautiful bouquet. To freshen the flowers later we stopped at a roadside inn for water. My wife noticed then a card attached. It read: "A joyous journey is the wish of Mr. McIntyre's old American friend—Stewp."

Arnold Bennett, during a seasonal stay at Barbizon, used to do much bicycling in the cool glades of Fontainbleau. One warm afternoon after a long spin he dismounted and stretched out in a green arcadia to relax and watch clouds laze by. In vernal reverie he recalled one Hodgkins, an English friend he had not seen since youth, and made a mental notation to look him up when he returned to London. Refreshed by a brief nap, he carried his bicycle to the road and was about to pedal off when he decided to slake his thirst at one of those cupless drinking fountains nearby. A man ahead, bowing over to lip the gush of water, raised up. It was Hodgkins.

I reserve for a finale the spookiest of all coincidences I have observed. There was in Dayton, O., a bar known as Kiefaber's among whose patrons was a lovable telegraph operator known to all Middle West newspaper shops as Charles Melrose. We were lined up one afternoon lifting a shog to vile care but in midair Melrose put his glass down. "I must go home quickly," he said and rushed out, leaving his overcoat. It's been long ago and exact details are vague. But at the exact moment Melrose reached home a doctor had turned from either Melrose's mother or sister, bowed resignedly and pulled a sheet over the pillows.

JOHN D. DELVES FOR FOSSILS

Ormond Beach, Fla., April 23 (INS)—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., whose hobby of big business in which he became the world's first billionaire, changed to dispensing $750,000,000 in philanthropies, then to landscape gardening, now has a new one.

The latest enthusiasm of this 94-year-old genius, who three quarters of a century ago began laying down the principles that revolutionized business, is archeological research in America.

His millions have sent expeditions to delve into the mysteries of ancient Egypt and Babylonia but Rockefeller today is more interested in the bones, trinkets, bits of pottery and weapons that lie in Florida's huge shell mounds and that tell the story of America's early inhabitants, the nomandic Indian tribes.

Springfield, April 28 — Walter Birnie, 62, for many years prominently identified with the paper industry in this section, died at his home here.

Kidnap Scare Boy's Prank

Kidnap-conscious as all get-out, Joseph A. Van Mater of Waban waited for a cab today at Kent and Beacon sts. in Brookline.

A limousine swept by. The driver was manifestly in distress. Behind him, two well-bundled males pointed pistols at his head. A ride?

One of them might even have been Dillinger.

Doing his duty like a man, Mr. Van Mater called Station 16. Station 16 called Brookline headquarters. Cruising cars shot forth.

But alas, for melodrama!

He'd got the number of the car. It belongs to Mrs. Alice R. Beebe of Embankment rd. The "swarthy gunmen" were her 10-year-old son, Junior and a playmate, a little younger.

The pistols were toy pistols. And the newest kidnap scare was over.

The "ride victim" was Ronald Broad, a B. U. student, and Junior's tutor. The other sinister "rodman" was Billy Murphy, 9, son of Dr. William P. Murphy, a well known surgeon at Peter Bent Brigham hospital.

They were on their way to young Murphy's home at Sewall ave. to have a "duel." When Van Mater saw them, they were just sharpening up their shooting eyes.

MRS. RANTOUL NOT TO FIGHT

Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul, ousted yesterday from her post in the women's division of the ERA, will not carry any job fight to Washington, she announced today, declaring that she is perfectly satisfied that she is merely the victim of a political machine.

Questioned at her home, 12 Revere st., Jamaica Plain, Mrs. Rantoul, who held the position of director of the women's division since November 21, declined to criticize Joseph P. Carney, ERA administrator here, who removed her. In her place, he named Mrs. Jessie Waterman Brooks, Cambridge school committeewoman.

Mrs. Rantoul did not appear to be upset by her removal. She said she was tired and needed a rest after weeks of work on an unpaid job. She said that since her appointment, women working under her have made 916,225 articles of clothing for welfare relief.

MYSTERY FIRE SWEEPS HOME

Fire of mysterious origin swept through the two family house at 4995 Washington st., West Roxbury, today, and for a time threatened to spread to adjoining houses.

The fire, for which two alarms were sounded, started on the second floor of the building occupied by Saleem Thomas and worked its way through the roof before it was discovered by a neighbor.

LESS COSTLY AIR MAIL IS SEEN

St. Louis, April 28—Postmaster-General Farley said in an address here today that a better and more economical air mail service will result from cancellation of air mail contracts.

He was the principal speaker at the unveiling and sealing of the cornerstone of the new $1,569,000 federal building.

GILBERT SELDES

None of the attacks on the NRA which I have heard or read seem to me as important as the casual sentences spoken a few nights ago by Clifford Hugh Douglas, the English engineer and economist who was not discussing the NRA at all, but propounding the basis of the system of Social Credit of which he is the founder.

Gilbert Seldes

Major Douglas' ideas attract me because he supplies a sound foundation for good cheer. He does not believe the world must inevitably go to the deminition, bow-wows. He is on the side of industrial democracy and the earliest discoverer, so far as I know, of the most important fact in our present situation—that we live in an era of plenty.

* * *

The criticism of the NRA is that the NRA—and all similar works—attack the problem at the wrong end. They set up, through the Government, "a parallel technical organization," a second way of producing and manufacturing, which is totally unnecessary. There has been, I gather, no defect about producing; the experts in Detroit know how to make cars and the experts in Pittsburgh know how to make steel and the experts in Chicago know how to dress beef.

Communists may object that these people do not pay enough in wages or require labor under evil conditions. But as an engineer, Major Douglas goes directly to a single point: they can produce the goods.

Obviously the fault only lies in distributing the goods. It is a question of money. Yet the elaborate system of the NRA deals with new ways of manufacturing, new ways of bringing people to work in factories. Whether the NRA will create more or less goods, cannot be of importance unless some way is found of getting the goods into the hands of the man who smokes, the woman who uses lipstick, the children who wear shoes. Concentrate, the critic suggests, on that one problem.

* * *

Major Douglas' criticism of Socialism is also very keen. He says that all socialistic schemes, which would include Communism, are trying to force into industry a vast number of people who are not needed there. Again, as a technical man, he knows that it is wasteful to make fifty people do the work which ten can do better. For the other forty he proposes a "national dividend."

* * *

There may be difficulties in the way—there are sure to be. But I feel that Douglas is on the side of the future. People quarrel about his economics, but I have found no answer to his fundamental idea that we no longer require the work of the whole population in order to produce all the necessary goods. And therefore that a new method of providing people with money to buy things must be worked out.

Every once in a while the Administration acts in this sense. It does something to gold or borrows money to support the CWA or similar works—it tries to get money into the hands of the millions. Then old-fashioned economy clutches at its throat and salaries are slashed or an enterprise which ought to be large-scale is timidly contracted until it is worthless. I wish the President could have a talk with Clifford Hugh Douglas.

Boston's First Lady Plants Arbor Day Tree

WILLIAM LONG

MAYOR MANSFIELD

MRS. MANSFIELD

Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield, Boston's "first lady," set a good example today in observing Arbor Day on the Common. Accompanied by her husband, the mayor, and Park Commissioner William Long, she planted trees along the Oliver Wendell Holmes and the West st. walks, emphasizing the importance of reforestation even on a small scale in cities. MAYOR'S WIFE PLANTS TREE

Mayor and Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield performed the honors on the Common today, when Boston joined with the rest of the country in the observance of Arbor Day.

Two Siberian dwarf elms were set out b ythe mayor and his wife, one at the West st. walk and the other at the Oliver Wendell Holmes walk. Mrs. Mansfield set the sapling in at the latter site, while her husband looked on.

Attending the ceremony were Park Commissioner William E. Long, other city officials and several hundred persons, some of them members of organizations associated with the Arbor Day movement.

ELOPERS FOILED BY FOUR 6'S

Four sixes in the registration number of an automobile being used by a pretty second year student at Watertown high school and her boy friend, brought their romance to a halt today. An alert state trooper stopped them in East Brookfield.

Phyllis T. Edwardson, 17, of North Beacon st., Watertown, prominent athlete at Watertown high school, and James Clavardone, 19, of St. Mary's st., Watertown, disappeared last night.

Parents of the girl suspected an elopement and notified police, suggesting that the car might easily be stopped because the registration contained four sixes.

The parents proved right for shortly before noon today a state trooper in East Brookfield spotted the car as it passed through the center of the town.

Allerton A. Edwardson, father of the girl, left Watertown at noon to bring Phyllis home.

Freed on Kidnap, Police Seize Gray

A few minutes after an indictment charging him with attempted kidnaping had been nol prossed, John J. Gray, alias Mason, was placed under arrest by Bridgeport, Conn., police in Middlesex Superior court today.

Gray is wanted in that city in connection with a $30,000 real estate swindle nearly a year ago. Gray was arrested in January charged with the attempted kidnap of Moses H. Gulesian, wealthy Newton real estate man.

CIRCUS OPENS ON TUESDAY

With a thrill to the minute and a laugh every two minutes, the "greatest show on earth," otherwise known as the Ringling Brothers Barnum Bailey combined shows, will open Tuesday at the Boston Garden for a five-day engagement. The wide world has been combed to gather sensational, death-defying acts which make up the gala performance, reports the show announcement.

Riding acts, thrilling dives from the top of the Garden to a trapeze suspended in mid-air; Hugo Zachinni's new performance, presenting two human projectiles fired simultaneously from the single barrel of a huge cannon; Con Colleano, the only man in the world to achieve a front somersault on the tight-wire; the Loyal Repenskis, who present a back somersault from the back of a galloping horse to the back of another horse two horses away—these and a host of other acts will be presented.

Clowns to the number of 150 run wild in the show, for it is the "Humpty-Dumpty year" and the big show is celebrating with humor all the way through. Even leapers are loaded with comedy. The "leapers" hurdle from runways over backs of elephants, horses or anything else that is handy. Felix Adler, producing clown, has new gags which are calculated to make a stone image laugh, modestly assure the advance men.

Heiress Burned to Death in Hotel

Milwaukee, Wis., April 28 (INS)—Trapped by fire in her room on the 21st floor of Hotel Schroeder, Miss Viola B. Lonstorf, 48, mine heiress, world traveler and member of one of Wisconsin's wealthiest families, was burned to death early today. The fire was confined to her room. Firemen said she apparently had collapsed in attempting to summon aid.

No Wonder He's Happy!

Laugh, clown, laugh" is right—but not to hide a broken heart. DICKENS ROMANCE REVIVED AFTER 20 YEARS BY LETTER

Maria Beadnell's Note Congratulating Famous Author on Great Success Brings Quick Reply From Dickens

What Has Gone Before

In previous installments the parallel between the romance of David Copperfield and Dora in "David Copperfield" and his own youthful romance with Maria Beadnell was outlined. Today's installment reveals the revival in 1855 of his romance with Maria Beadnell. Then he was famous and the father of nine children: She had married Henry Louis Winter, a middle-class business man, and was a mother. Suddenly after a lapse of more than 20 years she wrote him a letter. His response, which precipitated the middle-age phase of their romance, is contained in the accompanying installment.

By H. H. HARPER

A GREAT storm was sweeping over England on the 8th of February, 1855, and the white spirits of unrest were riding high in the blast, prompting uneasy souls to all sorts of strange impulses. It was then that Maria Beadnell Winter, longing for a word from that fond lover of long ago, wrote him a letter.

It was a timid letter, with humble apologies, a bit of news of old friends—recalling long cherished memories—congratulations on his great success—anything that might make a page or two, reminding him of his old love.

But little did Maria Beadnell realize that it was destined to open a floodgate of memories that have enriched Dickens literature far more than anything else discovered since his death.

Coming home from the office of Household Words, Dickens had dined with his family, and later found his favorite seat before the study fire, where he sat alone reading as the storm shrouded the city in a pall of drifting snow. His own words, written the following morning, constitute the opening chapter of the most surprising self-revelations that ever fell from his pen. The letter he wrote read:

Tavistock House,
Saturday, February, 1855.

My Dear Mrs. Winter:

I constantly receive hundreds of letters in great varieties of writing, all perfectly strange to me, and (as you may suppose) have no particular interest in the faces of such general epistles.

As I was reading by my fire last night, a handful of notes was laid down on my table. I looked them over, and recognising the writing of no private friend, let them lie there, and went to my book. But I found my mind curiously disturbed, and wandering away through so many years to such early times of my life, that I was quite perplexed to account for it.

There was nothing in what I had been reading or immediately thinking about, to awaken such a train of thought, and at last it came into my head that it must have been suggested by something in the look of one of those letters. So I turned them over again, and suddenly the remembrance of your hand came upon me with an influence that I cannot express to you.

Three or four and twenty years vanished like a dream, and I opened it with the touch of my young friend David Copperfield when he was in love.

There was something so busy and so pleasant in your letter—so true and cheerful and frank and affectionate—that I read on with perfect delight until I came to your mention of your two little girls.

In the unsettled state of my thoughts, the existence of these dear children appeared such a prodigious phenomenon that I was inclined to suspect myself of being out of my mind, until it occurred to me that perhaps I had nine children of my own!

Then the three or four and twenty years began to rearrange themselves in a long procession between me and the changeless Past, and I could not help considering what strange stuff all our little stories are made of.

Believe me, you cannot more tenderly remember our old days and our old friends than I do. I hardly ever go into the city but I walk up an odd little court at the back of the Mansion House and come out by the corner of Lombard st.

Hundreds of times as I have passed the church there—on my way to and from the sea, the continent, and where not—I invariably associate it with somebody (God knows who) having told me that poor Anne was buried there.

If you would like to examine me in the name of a good-looking Cornish servant you used to have (I suppose she has twenty-nine great grandchildren now and walks with a stick), you will find my knowledge on the point correct, though it was a monstrous name too.

I forget nothing of those times. They are just as still and plain and clear as if I had never been in a crowd since, and had never seen nor heard my own name out of my own house. What should I be worth, or what would labour and success be worth, if it were otherwise!

Your letter is more touching to me from its good and gentle association with the state of Spring in which I was either much more wise or much more foolish than I am now—I never know which to think it—than I could tell you if I tried for a week. I will not try at all. I heartily respond to it, and shall be charmed to have a long talk with you, and most cordially glad to see you after all this length of time.

I am going to Paris tomorrow morning, but I purpose being back within a fortnight. When I return, Mrs. Dickens will come to you, to arrange a day for our seeing you and Mr. Winter (to whom I beg to be remembered) quietly to dinner. We will have no intruder or foreign creature on any pretense whatever, in order that we may set in without any restraint for a tremendous gossip.

On the Road to Fame!

Charles Dickens two years after he had scored his triumph with "David Copperfield." He was well on the road to fame when Henri Claudel made this daguerreotype in 1852.

Mary Anne Leigh we saw at Broadstairs about fifty years ago. Mrs. Dickens and her sister, who read all the marriages in all the papers, shrieked to me when the announcement of hers appeared, what did I think of that? I calmly replied that I thought it was time. I should have been more excited if I had known of the old gentleman with several thousand a year, uncountable grown-up children and no English grammar.

My mother has a strong objection to being considered in the least old, and usually appears here on Christmas Day in a juvenile cap, which takes an immense time in the putting on.

The fates seem to have made up their minds that I shall never see your father when he comes this way. David Lloyd is altogether an imposter—not having in the least changed (that I could make out when I saw him at the London Tavern) since what I suppose to have been the year 1770, when I found you three on Corn hill, with your poor mother, going to St. Mary Axe to order mysterious dresses—which afterwards turned out to be wedding garments.

That was in the remote period when you all wore green cloaks, cut (in my remembrance) very round, and which I am resolved to believe were made of merino. I escorted you with native gallantry to the dress maker's door, and your mother, seized with an apprehension—groundless upon my honor—that I might come in, said emphatically: "And now Mr. Dickin"—which she always used to call me—"we'll wish you good morning."

When I was writing the word Paris just now, I remembered that my existence was entirely uprooted and my whole being blighted by the Angel of my soul being sent there to finish her education!

If I can discharge any little commission for you, or bring home anything for the darlings, whom I cannot yet believe to be anything but a delusion of yours, pray employ me. [Was this an invitation to Maria to write again? Editor's note.] I shall be at the Hotel Meurice—locked up when within, as my only defense against my country and the United States—but a most punctual and reliable functionary if you will give me any employment.

My dear Mrs. Winter, I have been much moved by your letter; and the pleasure it has given me has some little sorrowful ingredient in it. In the strife and struggle of this great world where most of us lose each other so strangely, it is impossible to be spoken to out of the old times without a softened emotion.

You so belong to the days when the qualities that have done me most good since were growing in my boyish heart, that I cannot end my answer to you lightly.

The associations my memory has with you make your letter more—I want a word—invest it with a more immediate address to me than such a letter could have from anybody else. Mr. Winter will not mind that. We are all sailing away to the sea, and have a pleasure in thinking of the river we are upon, when it was very narrow and little.

Faithfully your friend,
CHARLES DICKENS.

Maria could scarcely have expected such a long, cordial letter as this. She had mentioned the hope that they might meet to talk over old times and old friends, and he "heartily responded" to the suggestion. Facetiously he called her the "Angel of his soul" and the closing paragraph contained as poetic a touch as any fond sweetheart could desire.

In the next installment in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser another love letter in this second phase of Dickens' romance with Maria Beadnell will appear.

NRA IS OLD DEAL IN HIGH GEAR, SAYS NYE

The NRA, although "beautifully conceived," has been so wrongly administered that it has turned out to be "just the old deal in high gear," U. S. Sen. Gerald P. Nye declared today.

In Boston to address the National League of Women Voters, the youthful North Dakota senator, himself a former small-town newspaper publisher, met Boston reporters at the Parker House this noon and gave them the "low-down" as he sees it on Brain Trust activities and on international armament competition.

If the NRA, he said, isn't put on a different track, America is due for a more severe and more lasting crash than that of 1929-1933.

"Monopoly is more strongly entrenched today than ever before," Nye asserted. "And small enterprise is up against the gun. Industry, instead of being de-centralized, is increasingly centralized. There were splendid possibilities in the NRA, as it was planned, but those possibilities have not been realized."

Sen. Nye outlined the work which is to be done by the New senatorial committee created to investigate munitions makers' profits and their effect, if any, on disarmament and world peace.

The committee, of which he is chairman, will "go the full route," Sen. Nye declared.

Danbury Strike Ends

Danbury Ct., April 28 (AP)—The Hatmakers' union voted today to return to work Monday pending arbitration of demand fr restoration of the wage scale of approximately $1.12 an hur in effect in 1929.

SUSPECTS HELD IN KIDNAPING

San Antonio, Tex., April 28 (AP)—A man and his wife were held here today for Miami, Fla., police, after 3 months-old Franklin Delano Roosevelt Goodman, reported missing, has been found at a tourist camp. Robert Moran was detained by detectives, while Mrs. Moran and the child were under special guard.

Moran, who said he owns a tourist camp at San Fernando, Cal., told officers the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Goodman, of Whitman, Mass., had persuaded him and his wife to adopt the child.

He said the two couples separated in Miami, making arrangements to meet in St. Petersburg, Fla., but the Goodmans failed to appear and the Morans drove west. Moran scoffed at the idea of kidnaping. He was held, however, after Detective Sergeant D. E. Kelly talked with Miami police by telephone.

WOMEN VOTERS TO AID JOBLESS

The National League of Women Voters in convention at the Hotel Statler today voted to support actively during the present session of Congress, unemployment compensation and the Copeland food and drug bill.

The league also voted to give immediate attention to the support of legislation favoring a merit system in all branches of the civil service.

During the coming year other subjects, which will receive the league's support are: adequate provision for maternity, infancy and child hygiene, a system of federal, state and local unemployment relief and international reduction of armament.

100 Men Will Visit Faulkner Hospital

John MacGregor, chairman of the Roslindale unit of the Faulkner Hospital Aid Association, has made arrangements for over 100 Roslindale and West Roxbury male citizens to inspect the hospital tomorrow afternoon.

Plans to Boost Port of Boston

Renewed efforts to restore Boston to her old time position as a leading U. S. port were under way today. New York City got 51.6 per cent of the nation's imports last year, or $748,000,000. Boston only had $93,000,000.

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

Greetings, Junior Birdmen. Here is some dandy news for you. So many members have been writing me that they feared, should they be lucky winners in our motto contest, that their parents would not permit them to accept an air trip alone to New York, or the grand prize of an air trip from coast to coast, that I have decided to make a radical change in your favor. I have cancelled the air trips and in their place we offer a wonderful substitute.

You know members, I told you some columns ago that this is your organization and we will do just about anything you say. And so when these many letters arrived, I decided it was best to be guided by your own wishes.

National Winner to Travel by Train

The coast to coast trip by train will take about ten days, and that will be a real vacation treat, for remember this trip will be made early in July when school is closed.

While I have not as yet laid out the new itinerary for this thrilling transcontinental trip, the lucky boy or girl will leave New York if he or she should be an eastern member, on the famous Twentieth Century Limited. A full day's stay in Chicago with a tour at the World's Fair and sightseeing around this great mid-western metropolis as the guest of our Chicago wing, is of course included in the program. The winner will then leave Chicago by another fast limited Pullman train for San Francisco where he, or she, will be feted by our junior birdmen wing in that city.

Here Is Program For Boston Winners

And even if you are not the national winner, just think what you will get if you are one of the four Boston winners. Here is their program:

The Boston winners will meet at headquarters of the Colonial Line, 158 Summer st., and board a Gray Line bus in Boston at 5:15 Friday afternoon, May 25, and arrive at Providence at 7:15 that evening. There they will go aboard one of the spacious, smooth-operating steamers of the Colonial Navigation Co., leaving at 7:30 p. m. and arriving at New York at 7 a. m. Saturday morning, May 26. If you have never made a boat trip or slept on a ship, this ride will be a treat in itself.

If one girl or two girls are winners, they will occupy a stateroom by themselves. Accompanying the party will be the adult representative of the Boston Evening American who is to guide them around the streets of New York and watch over their safety and their wants at all times.

Arriving in New York, the party will begin two days of never-to-be-forgotten sight-seeing. First, the party will register at a hotel where they will spend the night. Then they will visit National Headquarters of the Junior Birdmen where greetings will be extended. Then comes a sight-seeing tour in a huge bus to see New York's most historical places of interest. Then a visit to the Empire State building, the world's tallest building. Then a visit to the top of the Empire State building, the world's tallest building. Then a theatre or some other amusement.

They will start back to Boston at 6 p.m. Sunday evening on the Colonial's steamer, arrive in Providence at 6 o'clock the next morning, board a Gray line bus and reach Boston two hours later, at 8 o'clock Monday morning, May 28.

Now every boy and girl, between the ages of 10 and 21, can try for one of the four prizes. All you have to do is join the Junior Birdmen organization (if you haven't already sent in your application which is printed at the head of this column, and then read the rules for the Motto Contest.

But you'll have to hurry because your motto must be in the mails by Monday night, April 30.

Here are the rules for the motto contest:

1—No boy or girl may compete in the Junior Birdmen National Motto Contest unless he or she is a member of the Junior Birdmen organization. Boys and girls who sent in applications but have not as yet received their membership may submit mottoes. By the time the winners are chosen their membership will have been sent out and their names included on our records.

2—All mottoes must be sent to the Junior Birdmen wing through which you are enrolled. Be sure you put the words "Motto Contest" in lower left hand corner of your envelope when you address it.

3—Members may send in as many mottoes as they choose. Be sure to put your name and address on each list you send in.

4—In case of a tie, all tieing contestants will receive the full award.

5—Mottoes may contain any number of words, but preferably ten words or less.

6—All mottoes must be in the mail by Monday, midnight, April 30th.

7—Announcement of the winners of the local wing will be made in the junior birdmen column of Sunday, May 6th. Announcement of national winner will be made at a later date.

HAPPY LANDINGS!

91, Gets First 'Permanent'

Mrs. Jennie Steel, 91 years of age, who resides in Middleton, Essex County, today got thrilled over her first permanent wave.

"All I want now is an airplane ride. Then my thrills of life will be complete," she told her friends as she returned with sleek, grey curls to her home at 3 Pleasant st., Middleton.

Mrs. Steel, widow of a Civil War veteran, is past department president of the Massachusetts Auxiliary to the G. A. R. She is also past head of the Salem Lodge of the Eastern Star.

The last of 11 children, she was born in Lynn but for the past 25 years has resided in Middleton.

M'LEOD PAYOFF BILL GAINS FOR DEPOSITORS

By Universal Service

Washington, April 28—McLeod bank payoff bill forces have wrung a major concession from the administration.

Chairman Steagall of the House banking and currency committee introduced a substitute relief measure as a rider on the bill extending for another year the $2,500 temporary deposit guarantee in the 1933 bank act.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. would be authorized to expand its capital to $2,500,000,000 and purchase or make loans on the assets of all banks closed between Dec. 31, 1929, and Jan. 1, 1934.

Steagall declared it is designed to "get something done this session," in announcing he would press for quick passage.

Advocates of the McLeod bill, providing for full payoff, meanwhile continued their efforts to get their own measure before the House.

Rep. McLeod said:

"This administration concession shows that bank relief legislation can't be stopped. Steagall's action is a definite admission that depositors are entitled to relief. The next logical step would be for the administration to get behind the full payoff bill."

The insurance corporation has had similar power for a year, but has never invoked it. Steagall's bill, however, guarantees the corporation debentures and thus paves the way for their ready acceptance by bank receivers who had to deal with the corporation.

The McLeod petition to assure a vote on the original bill May 14 now has 82 names and needs only 63 more.

104TH INFANTRY CLOSES MEET

Marlboro, April 28—More than 600 veterans of the 104th Infantry of the A. E. F., today concluded their two-day annual convention with a colorful street parade.

The veterans concluded their business sessions with the election of officers and the adoption of resolutions offered to the convention yesterday.

Among the resolutions was one condemning the spreading of "Red" propaganda through the schools and colleges.

More than 40 units of the veterans were represented in the parade which concluded the convention.

It was the 15th reunion of the veterans and the largest ever held in point of numbers.

NURSE GUARDED FROM GANG

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 28—Armed officers guarded the Delaware County hospital today against gangland's attempts to finish a job, the assassination of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine.

"It's no use to save me," the young woman told police. "They'll get me anyway.They'd even come in here and do it."

Police believe she "knows too much" about silk truck hi-jacking operations.

She was not told about what police believed was the latest attempt on her life, however, and grew calm for the first time since she was found Thursday in the gang's hideout, left for dead.

A man wearing a purple shirt walked into the hospital yesterday, asking to make an inspection. Officers guarding Mrs. Fontaine were warned, and the man fled.

Authorities said she disclosed identities of two men and a woman who brought her to the hideout, naming associates of George Phillips, her gangster friend, slain April 12 by Washington police.

SENATE BACKS AIR MAIL BILL

Washington, April 28—The drive of Republican senators to restore air mail contracts to companies that held them prior to the Farley cancellation order was defeated in the Senate today.

The Senate voted 56 to 19 against the Austin-White amendment to the McKellar-Black air mail bill which would have restored the cancelled contracts and would have provided a commission of seven members to make a survey and report to Congress.

Seven Republicans, Borah, Capper, Couzens, Frazier, Johnson, La Follette, and Norris—and Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, joined 48 Democrats against it.

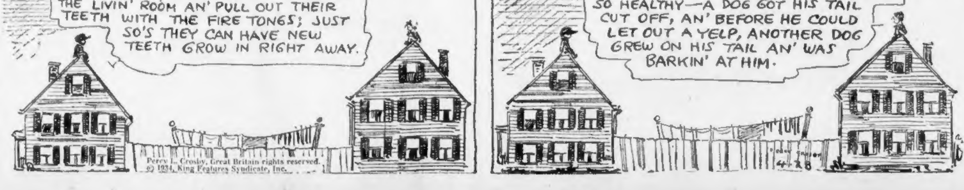
Another substitute by three Republicans—Austin, Davis and Barbour—which provided that the postmaster-general place mail on air lines under authority of the Department of Commerce and specify rates also was rejected 56 to 19. The lineup was the same.

$11,745 Claims to Net Bank $1420

Federal Judge Elisha H. Brewster today authorized Receiver James H. Brennan of the closed Boston-Continental National Bank to compromise bank claims of $11,745.36 for $1420.

John I. Greenberg owes $1,426.71 for stock assessment and will settle for $300. William C. Squires owes a stock assessment and will pay $220. I. Otto Miller owes $1300 on a note, endorsed by Kassell and Fannie I. Miller. He has been allowed to settle for $400. Max Leavitt owes $8,138.65 and he will pay $500. Hodgson, Kennard & Co., Inc., owes $3766.22 and has agreed to pay 60 per cent in settlement.

SKIPPY — It's an "Air Tail"



WHERE I COME FROM THE AIR IS SO HEALTHY, THAT PEOPLE SIT AROUND THE LIVIN' ROOM AN' PULL OUT THEIR TEETH WITH THE FIRE TONGS; JUST SO'S THEY CAN HAVE NEW TEETH GROW IN RIGHT AWAY.
TO ME THAT'S A VERY UNHEALTHY CLIMATE, BECAUSE WHERE I COME FROM THE AIR IS SO HEALTHY—A DOG GOT HIS TAIL CUT OFF, AN' BEFORE HE COULD LET OUT A YELP, ANOTHER DOG GREW ON HIS TAIL AN' WAS BARKIN' AT HIM.

NORMA'S TRYST WITH MURTON IS BLOCKED

also been referred to as a lie or truth detector.

Norma will not be called to the witness stand in the defense of her husband or his brother and Faber, it was said.

EMOTIONAL RESPONSES

The doctors were Max Bennett, Israel Kopp and Thomas McHugh and the fourth man was Joseph Schriber, B. S., a technician. They were accompanied to the jail by Frances Millen, sister of the brothers.

Blood tests and metabolism were made.

"I can't make any definite statement now about lumbar tests tomorrow," said Dr. Bennett who was in charge. He said neither brother would suffer any ill effects from the tests today.

Their emotional responses were registered on a barometer attached to one of the do-jiggers of the metabolism machine.

Dr. Bennett will be one of the two doctors who will talk with Norma tomorrow. The other will be Henry Parnell.

PLAN NEW JAIL TRYST

The statements she makes today to the psychiatrists, however, may play an important part in the trial of the three men for their lives.

Intimate details of the lives Norma and Murton led following their chance meeting in a dance hall at Nantasket Beach will be delved into. The psychiatrists hope to establish, from these details that Murton is mentally abnormal.

Judge Nelson P. Brown, presiding at the trial of the Millens his home in Everett today, out of his home in Eevrett today, out of touch of the defense attorneys who sought permission for the meeting of Norma and her husband.

The attorneys were optimistic, however, and hoped to get permission for the meeting before nightfall.

Norma's attorney, George Douglass, and her husband's associate counsel, Louis O'Keefe, were at the East Dedham jail early today, in anticipation of the mental tests

TO SEE PROSECUTOR

Earlier in the week, both the Millen brothers refused to entertain the idea of subjecting themselves to these tests, but strong representations of their chief counsel, Atty. Harvey, and of the two psychiatrists finally changed their minds.

"We won't go for that stuff" chunky Irving Millen had flatly told his lawyers earlier in the week, but today he and his brother were of a different frame of mind.

A lot of water has gone under the bridge since last Monday morning when Dewing outlined the government's case which may send the trio of prisoners to the electric chair. Forty-nine state witnesses have testified.

There is a pause in the Commonwealth's case today. State evidence is suspended while Harvey and Faber's attorney, William R. Scharton, seek evidence in support of their objections to admission of the testimony of Saul Messinger.

Messinger went on as the 38th witness with the end of the government's direct evidence in sight.

He testified to meeting Murton and his bride at a New York hotel and to hearing from his lips an admission that he had robbed a Needham bank and shot two policemen. He was asked whether Murton had named his accomplices in the crime and said that he had. He was asked who they were and there were immediate objections.

During the following recess, Messinger walked past the cage on his way from the courtroom and his one time school chum, Murton, glaring, following his progress and called:

"You yellow rat."

Few in the courtroom heard it. If Messinger did, he gave no sign.

Recess was followed by the abrupt withdrawal of Messinger from the stand.

TELLS OF ARREST

He was sent back to the jail cell in which he has a radio and enjoys special liberty. Dewing announced suspension of his testimony and called the first group of five New York detectives, who will tell about the apprehension of the Millen brothers in New York.

Edmund O'Brien, a bit stockier than Jack Dempsey but with a deeper voice, told of the arrest of the brothers at the Hotel Lincoln, of location of their two cars, of seizing guns, money, and other articles. One of the "other articles" was an insurance policy for $5000, made out in Murton's name with Norma as beneficiary.

Another was an air pilot's license in the name of Murton "Nelson," issued more than three weeks after the Needham crime. Still another was a baggage check issued at the Washington railroad terminal which Dewing said he would later connect with the case.

And still another was a .38 caliber, loaded revolver, marked "W. P. D.," alleged to have been in possession of Murton.

O'Brien's testimony may be concluded before defense counsel introduce evidence in support of their objection to Messinger's. If the objections to Messinger are overruled by Judge Brown, the onetime pal of Murton, now an aspirant to the New York police force, will be recalled to continue his story with a gruelling cross-examination in sight.

JURORS WHILE TIME AWAY

There remain, then, the four other New York detectives, Massachusetts State Detectives Stokes, Ferrari and Barrett and Capt. Charles A. Van Amburgh, the fire arms expert, and such surprises as the district attorney may have in store.

Where yesterday it appeared that Dewing might conclude the Commonwealth's case by Monday night, as he had anticipated, it now appears possible that the state will require a good part of next week to finish. It looks like a long trial.

The jury may ride tomorrow to Falmouth on the Cape or to Shelburne Falls, the destination yet undecided. The jurors would have liked to have attended last night's wrestling matches but ping-ponged and bridged themselves into the sandman's arms and were early to bed.

Faces Quiz to Aid Murt

Psychiatrists were to question Norma Brighton Millen in Dedham jail today in an effort to check the actions of Murton Millen, her husband, accused in the Needham Trust Co. holdup. The data obtained is to be used in the defence of Millen. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

PEMBER GIRL DROPS CHARGE

Gen. Daniel Needham, commissioner of public safety, announced today that he would investigate the story of Miss Dorothy Pember, 25, Wellesley housemaid, who named a state police sergeant and a trooper, despite the fact that court action was formally dropped today.

Clerk Francis J. Squires of Dedham district court announced that there would be no hearing on her application for a complaint because he had received a letter, postmarked Newton Lower Falls, reading:

"I wish to drop the case brought by me.
(signed) Dorothy Pember."

Mrs. Louis Perini, Maugus ave., Wellesley, said that Miss Pember had given up her position and did not say where she was going.

26 Ill of Typhoid

Barre, Vt., April 28—Twenty-six cases of typhoid fever had been reported from Websterville, a small town in the granite quarry district.

Roosevelt Asked to Cruise Here

Washington, April 28—President Roosevelt was invited today by the New England Council to spend part of his vacation this summer cruising in New England waters. The invitation was extended by Col. W. A. Barron, of Crawford Notch, N. H., chairman of the council's recreational development committee.

Girl Bike Riders in Shorts Ruled O. K. for Park

Nashville, April 28 (AP)—Some young women went riding upon bicycles in Nashville's Shelby park in shorts recently and today there was a statement from the City Park Commission Chairman, Charles M. McCabe, relative to shorts as attire for the woman bicycle rider.

As Mr. McCabe explained it, a park policeman saw the girls—pedaling along, and decided that such attire was not for public parks. So the policeman told the girls to leave the park. They did. They went to Mr. McCabe and told their troubles.

The park chief wrote to the park policeman as follows:

"The old order changeth. The present generation has decided that loveliness in woman does not depend entirely on foreign aid of adornment.

"There was a time when if a woman dropped her glove or her hankerchief, her bustles and tightly-laced corsets prevented her from stooping—hence the age of chivalry when gallant knights immediately went to her aid.

"The bathing suit may be a bit daring, but shorts for athletic sports and exercises have been accepted as the correct and comfortable garment, and if they may be worn on the basketball floor and on the tennis field I see no reason to forbid them in our parks as a bicycling uniform."

And thus he concluded with a ruling to the policeman:

"So, let the pedaling extremities be free for action, health and pleasure of women as well as the men."

59 SURVIVE IN SPELLING BEE FOR FINALS

By THE SPELLING BEE EDITOR

From Cohasset to Swampscott and from Westwood to Boston yesterday deep voices of masters and teachers intoned words that were answered in the piping tones of School Spelling Champions. And in the mass of 650 complicated and tricky words offered to these qualified young spellers there eventually came words which eliminated 241 of them—School Champions all—leaving the field to 59 newly crowned District Champions.

FINALS ON MAY 12

Every pupil in every elementary school in Boston and in 20 other cities and towns within a radius of 15 miles was interested in a definite competitor in yesterday's far-flung Championship Spelling Bee. There is a well-based interest and pride throughout the enrollments and teaching force of the schools in the sterling performance of the newest and most select group of Champions, some of whom spelled constantly for more than an hour.

The caliber of these Champions assures a tremendously interesting competition on May 12 when these Spelling Stars will compete against each other at the Boston Garden to determine which boy or girl will represent Metropolitan Boston in the National Grade School Spelling Championships to be held at Washington. At that occasion, to which the public will be invited, beautiful silver medals will be awarded to the 59 Champions who won yesterday's absorbing contests.

A beautiful solid gold medal will be presented to the winner of that competition and the Champion, boy or girl, will be sent to Washington for a delightful vacation accompanied by a parent, teacher or guardian, at the expense of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Today handsome certificates of merit will be sent to the victors in yesterday's District Championship competition and on Monday the last of the medals won by School Champions will be in the mails.

EDUCATORS ENTHUSED

It is impossible to measure the enthusiasm indicated not only in yesterday's closely fought competitions in the prospects of the final and decisive great public Spelling Bee which will bring all of these talented district champions into the public eye a week from next Saturday. In the course of yesterday's spelling bees more than one hundred educators telephoned with no other purpose except to express appreciation and approval of every detail of this great educational contest sponsored by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

So eager have been all of the Grade, School and District Champions to obtain any factor of study which would aid in their spelling efficiency in this particular contest that the Boston American will in Monday continue to publish a list of difficult words daily. Words, incidentally, which are as important to grown-up readers as to those alert contestants.

In tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser names of District winners will be listed and further names will appear in the Boston Evening American on Monday.

Watch these columns daily for details regarding the interesting individuals who have come into the final phase of this thrilling and vast competition and for other details, including the interesting arrangements for the great public Spelling Bee at the Boston Garden on Saturday, May 12.

Massachusetts Is Kidnap Clue Scene

Rutland, Vt., April 28—A Massachusetts angle to the mysterious kidnaping investigation conducted by a score of federal agents became known today when a distinguished appearing man, driven about in an expensive car bearing Massachusetts license plates, was seen in conference with the government officers.

The government agents have refused to explain their mission, beyond admitting an extortion plot.

Roosevelt Favors World Silver Pact

WFashington, April 28 (AP)—An international agreement to increase the use of silven as a backing for currency is desired by the administration.

This was re-emphasized today at the White House, following statements by congressional leaders leaders that they had been informed by President Roosevelt that he is willing to have as much as 30 per cent of the nation's money backed by silver.

Police Quiz Mate of Blast Victim

Chicopee, April 28 (AP)—Joseph Pronko, whose wife was killed by an explosion that completely demolished their cottage late Thursday night, and Victor Beaulieu, boarder in the family, returned here today from Halifax, Vt.

Immediately on their arrival they were closeted with detectives of the police department, who seek light on several unexplained angles of the explosion.

Truck Kills Girl, 4

Pawtucket, R. I., April 28—Betty Corley, 4, was killed on Denefelt st. in front of her home, by a truck driven by John Rodgers of Central Falls, Mass., who was absolved of blame.

KIDNAPED BABY FEARED SLAIN

unteer searchers suspended their activity for 24 hours to give the Robles family a chance to negotiate with the kidnapers, but this morning, reviewing the tragedies of the Lindbergh case and recent work of degenerates in Chicago, authorities asserted that if the abductors did not free the girl soon they favored resuming their extensive manhunt.

TORCHES FLARE SIGNAL

Torches flashed from Sentinel Peak, at the edge of the city, to advise the abductors that their demands had been satisfied and that the child should be released.

As the flares appeared all eyes were fastened on the historic peak, even as Bernabe Robles, rich cattleman, and his young bride had watched for the same signal years ago indicating the approach of wild Apache Indians when Geronimo and his warriors ravished this territory.

The ransom, originally set at $15,000, was believed reduced to $10,000. Bernabe Robles drew $8000 in bills of low denomination from the bank, and contact with the kidnapers was established yesterday.

Final arrangements for the release of the child were made in a telephone call by the kidnapers to the Robles home. Police attempted in vain to trace the call.

As the hours passed after the torches had been set off, members of the Robles family began to fear the child had been killed.

According to the directions given the elder Robles, the child would be liberated within an hour or two after the ransom had been paid.

Where the money was secreted was known only to an intermediary—a prominent public official—and the elder Robles.

While the city waited tensely, Gov. Moeur arrived here from Phoenix to investigate the kidnaping.

"This abduction is a splotch on Arizona," he said, as he expressed his determination to "ferret out these despicable criminals if we have to throw every resource in the state behind the police officers."

Thurston Regains Stolen Note and Reads Code

This is the third in a series of articles to depict the experiences of Thurston, The Magician. They are written exclusively for the Boston Evening American Secret Agent X-9 members by Thurston himself, while he is appearing at the Metropolitan Theater.

By THURSTON, the MAGICIAN

Forty years I have wandered all over the globe and given magic shows in every land. And in this time I have had enough adventure to satisfy a dozen lifetimes.

Here is one of those adventures, told for the benefit of the members of the Boston American's Secret Agent X-9 Club.

On a sea trip the public entertainer is thrown in close contact with the people who are usually separated from him by the footlights. Once I was a fellow passenger of the Duke of Connaught and his beautiful daughter, Princess Pat, and we spent many delightful hours together.

One afternoon the Duke confided to me that an important paper was missing from his portfolio. A diplomatic message in code, relating to certain secret negotiations between Great Britain and Italy.

"Very annoying," groused the Duke. "But there is one consolation—no one can read the message."

"What can be put into code can be deciphered," I said.

The Duke laughed. "Yes, if you know the key-word. The message is written in my own cipher and my own password is the only key that will unlock it."

"The Princess Pat was smiling at me. "What do you say to that, Mr. Magician?"

"Only that I accept your challenge. I will find the paper and I will decipher the message."

A tall order But again I had a hunch. And I have learned by experience always to play my hunches to the limit.

It would be too long a story to relate how I found that paper. But I did—and within eight hours. I found it in the stateroom of a Swedish woman who, I learned later, was one of the ace operatives of the Russian Secret Service. When I handed the paper to the Duke, his eyes twinkled.

"Have you deciphered the message?" he asked.

"Give me 24 hours and I will give you the message in English. Cipher reading is one of my hobbies."

"Imposible, my dear Thurston. You couldn't get the keyword in 24 years."

"It wouldn't take me 24 seconds to guess the keyword," I said, calmly. "It's your own keyword, you know and"—here I bowed to the Princess Pat—"and Patricia is a pretty name."

For a moment the Duke of Connaught looked at me with steady eyes. Then he smiled.

"Thurston," he said, "if you ever think of giving up your profession, let me know. One of the head jobs in the secret service will be waiting for you."

ROOSEVELT TO REST NOW ON HIS LAURELS

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

Washington, April 28 (INS)—President Roosevelt quietly has notified his leaders in Congress to curtail huge federal relief expenditures while his administration encourages private business to take up the burden of stabilizing the national recovery program, it was reported reliably today on Capitol Hill.

The administration appeared ready to adopt a new policy of strengthening existing economic remedies and then "resting on its laurels" while giving the country a chance to recover. The hiatus would be used by the President to determine whether his recovery program is succeeding.

Congressional leaders were told frankly that the bill, giving the President power to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements, must be enacted. They replied that it would be passed. He also indicated a desire to have both the NRA and AAA strengthened before Congress quits. But he definitely indicated opposition to increasing Federal relief expenditures.

It appeared administration heads were worried by popular reaction against the new tax bill, which would increase federal levies by $417,000,000 above a year ago. The President's advisors were alarmed even more by fears over what will happen when ever higher taxes are asked to help pay for the cost of the recovery program. Interest on the public debt alone is near $1,000,000,000 a year.

The President meanwhile faced a clash with Congress on the monetary issue. It may force him to modify his program to the extent of proposing some new monetary measures, although at the present moment, he is adamant against remonetizing silver.

traordinary swarms of "buffalo gnats," a name that dates back to days when there were buffaloes roaming around. The insects appear in clouds of untold hundreds of millions, reminding men of the danger of insect domination, always present.

Scores of horses and mules are reported killed by the fierce, tiny creatures, that plant poison with their bite and poison the lungs of animals that breathe them in.

The Arkansas and the National Department of Agriculture might try fighting these dangerous creatures with airplanes, flying above them, scattering under pressure a fine rain of petroleum, enough to destroy the breathing of the buffalo gnats, not enough to hurt anything else.

Probably in future the airplane will do man's fighting against the buffalo gnats. Florida might try the rain of petroleum sometime for the salt-water mosquitoes that appear in their billions. Or Standard or Gulf oil might have their laboratories experiment for the public service and increase sales.

Charles Outlaw, sixty years old, with gray hair, sat down in the Texas electric chair yesterday, saying: "Warden, I'm too old to die with a lie on my lips. I did not do it."

Law and the jury thought he did murder Mrs. Frank McCall, besides beating her invalid husband, who died later, her crippled mother and her small daughter.

The man may not have been too old to "die with a lie on his lips," for one who will commit a murder almost invariably will lie about it to the very end. It might have been more convincing if he had said: "I'm too old a man for society to kill without disgracing itself."

"WAR LORD" CINEMA GETS SOME OVERFLOW FILM FROM "OIL FOR LAMPS"

Lights and Shadows

By

George Holland

Gloria Swanson slightly in eclipse as many high-spenders find themselves temporarily, is being charged with many alleged faults. One of them, chief of them, is temperament. This has been charged against her since she undertook to make personal appearances at movie houses, the first of which occurred two weeks ago at a New York theater. Gloria was "pencilled-in," that is tentatively booked, at the Metropolitan Theater, but the engagement has been cancelled through a variety of considerations and not the least among them was the high price of her act. Poor Gloria, the toast for many years of a couple of continents, made her commercial wounds considerably worse by stumbling at her New York premiere. Stage-fright, of all things. But her high degree of courage has already overcome these minor hurts. What is probably breaking her heart is the failure of her match with the Irish squire, Michael Farmer. This romance was one for the book. The odds on its success, because of the couple's almost idyllic devotion, was no worse than even money at any time, New York totalizer or Hollywood.

Gloria Swanson

You are not likely to greet Miss Swanson in Boston this season, but I predict that she will be headline material for years to come. Without stage experience, she met the Broadway invaders in their own metier, the talking picture, and in an early talkie "The Trespasser," she was one of the first players to convince me that a real threat to the living stage had made its bid for ransom.

I burned at a recent statement by a Hollywood Temple Sam, one of the biggest shots they have, that the public demands a star like the Mae West of the Month, or the Garbo of the Year, and that pictures without one of these are doomed to slight profits or losses. I thought of Charles Laughton and Elizabeth Bergner talked about "The Power and Glory," and Colleen Moore. "The Power and Glory," was a "trick" picture, not particularly good. Miss Moore, one of the real greats of the fabulous motion-picture era, saved the picture by a performance shot with genius. Yet, the Hollywood big-wig presumed to opine that the picture would have been a huge commercial success had one of the reigning stars played the woman's part. I think the picture would have been hissed if Colleen Moore had not chosen it for her triumphant comeback.

Senator Langone met Georgie Raft with Dan Carroll, manager of boxers. "Raft?" asked the North End senator. "What's his weight and when does he fight?" The large Mr. Carroll, equal to almost any occasion, answered: "He's not a fighter. He's what you dive off of at L street."

The title of Molly Picon's musical comedy vehicle, which opens at the Colonial theater Monday night is "The Circus Girl," not "The Chorus Girl." We called it "The Circus Girl" in these daily chapters when even the paid advertisements were billing it "The Chorus Girl." And if anything less trivial offered a reason for gloating than this, you name it.

Sure-Fire Bets Thought to Hang on Mysteries as Murder Ideas Flow

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, April 28—Murder mysteries must appeal to the universal taste. Up to now, no thriller of this kind, properly produced, has ever failed to coax people into the box office. That's probably the reason Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is about to produce "Death on the Diamond," by Courtland Fitzsimmons, author of "70,000 Witnesses."

Joseph McGillicuddy Sherman, who used to write poems of praise about film favorites, has now turned writer and will adapt the story in conjunction with its author. Lucien Hubbard is named as the producer and Robert Montgomery is the big hero. For once he won't play the flippant young American.

While Fred Jackman and Robert Florey are turned loose with cameras in China, getting exteriors for "Oil for the Lamps of China," what's to prevent their getting a little excess footage. You will see some of their extra scenes in "War Lord" which Jack Warner will produce with Edward G. Robinson. The story of "War Lord" is an original by Robert Lord and is based on the life of a famous Chinese general. It's the story of characterization that Robinson does so well and you will find that it's to be more than the ordinary picture what with these real Chinese exteriors and Robinson's characterization.

Isabel Jewell's contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has expired and so the little Jewell in Lee Tracy's life has moved to Paramount where Lee is holding forth. Tracy's contract with Paramount is really something! He makes three pictures a year and selects his own stories which are optional with himself and the studio. If you think Lee ate humble pie because of his Mexican escapade, well, you don't know Tracy. His first for Paramount, "A Son Comes Home," gives him the talented Dorothy Dell as his leading woman.

On a scant twenty-four hours' notice Frances Marion is off for Honolulu. Irving Thalberg is sending her to meet George Hill and the incoming technical men who have been in China photographing scenes for "Good Earth." Frances will have five days on the boat with the "Good Earth" company, during which time she will prepare the dialogue for the first sequence. That means that Pearl Buck's story will be in production sooner than anyone expected. Meanwhile there are rumors that Frances and George are again romantically interested in each other.

Methinks the lady changes her mind too often. The last news from Glenda Farrell is that she is seriously considering marrying Robert Riskin and going to Europe next week with him. Glenda, it seems, is pouting at Warner Brothers and she has all but decided to give up her job in favor of matrimony. As for Bob, being a perfect gentleman he says nothing but waits for the lady to make up her mind.

If Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., can tear himself away from Gertrude Lawrence's side, he may answer Phil Goldstone's invitation to play "Robin Hood." Young Doug opens May 1 in a play with Gertrude Lawrence and everyone expects that these two will marry. M. C. Levee, his agent, sent him a cable with the offer to return to Hollywood and play the role in the picture that is considered by many to have been the finest thing his father ever made. But the chances are against young Doug returning unless Miss Lawrence comes with him.

Japan takes its movies and its movie folk seriously. James Young, Universal correspondent, sends a copy of the Tokyo Advertiser. Two full volumes are devoted to the arrival of the Joe E. Browns and the Mervyn Le Roys. Seems Joe E. and Mervyn staged an impromptu movie atop the roof of one of the big hotels and Mervyn's bride and Mrs. Brown were in the cast. Every move of the Hollywood folk is registered and reams of their conversation.

"Bombay Mail"

Starting tomorrow the Gayety Theater screen will feature Edmund Lowe in "Bombay Mail," with Ralph Forbes and Shirley Grey. The co-feature will be "Olsen's Big Moment," with El Brendel, Walter Catlett and Barbara Weeks. On the stage there will be five vaudeville acts.

'Men in White' Is Featured at Orpheum

"Men in White," a truly great motion picture drama, is featured at Loew's Orpheum on the new bill, along with a new program of vaudeville. The film is the peak of modern drama of the cinema season, and has a grand cast, headed by Clark Gable and Myrna Loy.

* * *

The photoplay is based on the stage play. It is a story told in vivid strokes, in a great modern hospital. It has to do with Clark Gable as Dr. Ferguson, a young interne, who is anxious to become a great surgeon like his mentor, Dr. Hochberg, played by Jean Hersholt. But he is also in love with Laura, a young heiress (Myrna Loy). A breach is inevitable, and in disappointment, Gable enters into a liaison with Barbara, a nurse (Elizabeth Allan). As a result Barbara is forced to undergo an illegal operation, which she does outside the hospital. Peritonitis sets in; dying, Barbara undergoes another operation at the hands of Gable, the man she loves, while his fiancee looks on, pale and trembling. The picture ends on a high, poignant note of promise and retribution.

Clark Gable

In addition to the four important characters portrayed by Gable, Miss Loy, Miss Allan and Jean Hersholt, each of which is exceedingly well done, lesser roles are capably handled by Otto Kruger, C. Henry Gordon, Russell Hardie and Wallace Ford.

* * *

The new stage bill has Stuart and Lash for headliners, and merry they are, with a comedy, song and dance act. Barbara O'Neal nicely assists in a skit, the title of which reveals its zestful nature, "Believe It, or Nuts." Flo Merman and Cecille Bronson were not very far behind with their flashy dancing, "Too Many Boy Friends," in which the Three Page Boys are featured. A novelty in the form of a real Punch and Judy show was brought forth by George Prentice to the great enjoyment of all.

David Harum Opens Today at Uptown

Starting yesterday the Uptown theater presents as its main attraction Will Rogers in "David Harum." The screen play, following closely the typically American theme of the novel, concerns itself with the life of a shrewd horse-trader. The cast includes Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Stepin Fetchit, Charles Middleton and Noah Beery. James Cruze directed.

On the same program is shown "Coming Out Party" which features Frances Dee, Gene Raymond, Nigel Bruce and Alison Skipworth, under the direction of John Blystone.

First Run Film

At the Bowdoin Sq. Theater tomorrow will be featured the first run film, "Murder on the Campus," with Shirley Grey, Charles Starrett and J. Farrell McDonald. Another picture is "This Man Is Mine," with Irene Dunne. Thelma Todd will be seen in "Air Fright," a comedy. Six vaudeville acts will be featured on stage. On Wednesday night Art Spaulding's Stars of the Future will appear.

Tchaikovsky Festival Will End Tonight

By MOSES SMITH

The program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which was played yesterday afternoon and will be repeated tonight ends the current Tchaikovsky Festival and the symphonic season as well.

These final concerts round off a decade during which Serge Koussevitzky has been leading the famous orchestra—the longest continous tenure any conductor of that organization has enjoyed. The present season has been notable for many remarkable performances, interesting new and semi-new works, and unusually fine soloists.

A review of the season, as well as a general survey of Mr. Koussevitzky's long reign, may for the moment be postponed.

ARISE FROM SEATS

It is enough to say here that the nature of his great achievements must have at least flitted through the minds of the people in the audience yesterday as they arose from their seats to greet him at the begining of the concert. And it must have been partially responsible for the tremendous ovation that broke out when the concert was finished.

The music itself was something to excite the listener. The program consisted of only two works—the first and fifth symphonies of Tchaikovsky, in G minor and E minor. The latter work is familiar here, especially in the rendering of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Koussevitzky.

BALANCE DESCRIBED

The performance of yesterday was typical—only more so. It was superbly planned, the various episodes were beautifully balanced. The contrasts in dynamics and movement were almost hysterically sharp—but this is Tchaikovsky. And everything the conductor asked from his men he got.

The G minor symphony, written almost 80 years ago, when Tchaikovsky was in his mid-twenties had never (believe it or not!) been played at a Boston Symphony concert. In its dramatic moments and in touches of orchestral coloring it predicts the composer of the later symphonies. To the extent that the lyrical mood prevails, however, this is the Tchaikovsky of approximately such a work as the piano piece. "Troika." There is no intention to be snobbish in this statement, for the symphony has an old-world charm. It was well-liked by yesterday's audience, who heard what seemed like an excellent performance.

Shakings May Rid World of Evil Things and Leave Good, Thinks Rev. Kinsolving

By REV. DR. ARTHUR LEE KINSOLVING

Rector of Trinity Church

OUT of a crevice in the 12th Chapter of the quaint Epistle to the Hebrews, I find these words:

"Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but the heaven . . . removing those things that are shaken as things that are made, that the things which cannot be shaken may remain."

Professor Seneca Smith of Yale suggests a modern paraphrase, to clarify the thought:

"Things are being shaken; very well, let them shake. They are man-made anyway. Besides, they are shaken in order that the things which cannot be shaken may abide."

Have we not here a clue to a wise attitude toward the upheavals of the last few years? Looking back, it was natural that at first we were alarmed. A friend from California told me of the consternation to the human mind caused by the first rumble of the earthquake. What experience more alarming than to see the familiar, solid scenes of earth reel and stagger like a drunken man!

When out of the horizon of human life, social custom and moral judgment first revealed rifts and disturbances, we humans were alarmed, for we cling to the familiar and the customary. We like the things we have been used to for a long while. We would prefer not to have these sudden changes come.

In the coal mines the time was when they made use of little children to separate the shale and the slag from the coal that was of real worth, but now instead there is a great machine which gathers the whole mass together and shakes them violently. The slag and the shale, being lighter, are scattered off and taken away by belts.

So the world today seems to be shaken, that the things which are man-made and false and unworthy may be shaken off, but that the things which cannot be shaken may abide. And to us who must build our interests and make a life in the midst of these convulsions and disturbances it is essential to find some centers of quiet where the human spirit may be calm.

Pops to Open Wednesday

The Symphony Hall Pops open their 49th season Wednesday night. Arthur Fiedler will be the conductor for the fifth season, which will be 10 weeks long, with daily performances except on Sundays. As usual the audiences seated at the tables on the floor may smoke or partake of refreshments, which this year will include full-strength wines, beer and ale.

The music will vary from light selections from musical plays to numbers from the regular symphonic repertoire.

Society Notes

Mrs. Erwin Schell will entertain the members of the Corporation of the Nursery Training School of Boston of which she is president, at an informal supper party preceding the annual meeting of the Corporation on Monday evening. The school is located at 147 Ruggles st., and directed by Miss Abigail Adams Eliot, is a nationally known training center for nursery school teachers and in connection with its training course conducts a nursery school for children of the neighborhood.

World's Dolls Coming Here

A rare collection of dolls from all parts of the world, owned by Mrs. Frederick W. Fitts, will be on exhibit during "Circus Days," May 10 and 11, at Brattle Hall. This circus is under the auspices of members of Christ Church, Cambridge, headed by Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn. Over a hundred dolls, many of them very old, will be shown.

"Rebecca Enjoying Poor Health," an early American doll with arm and leg missing; "Boy Who Saw Sunrise," a little Eskimo dressed in sealskin whose bright blue nose illustrated his unusual name.

Marriage to R. B. Elwell Will Be Held in Winchester Afternoon of May 19

A GAY round of pre-nuptial parties will be given for Miss Eleanor Dwinell Ives before she steps aboard the matrimonial ship on May 19 at 4 p. m., in the Winchester Unitarian Church, as the bride of Mr. Reginald Babson Elwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Elwell of Arlington.

Tomorrow evening a gay young crowd will gather at the home of Mrs. James Bailey for an informal supper party and on Thursday evening Mrs. Gage Bailey will entertain for the prospective bride and groom at a large dinner party. The bridesmaids' dinner will be given at the home of Mrs. Robert Whittemore on Saturday, May 12, while Mr. Elwell entertains his ushers that evening at the Harvard Club.

* * *

The week immediately preceding the wedding will be marked by two luncheons for the bride and her attendants, one on Tuesday, May 16, by Mrs. Oscar J. Ives in Salem and one on Wednesday by Mrs. Elwell, the groom's mother. The bridal dinner given by the parents of the bride on Thursday evening, May 17, will climax the gay festivities.

Mrs. Robert M. Whittemore of Weston (Alice Ives) will be the matron of honor and Miss Charlotte Ives will be a bridesmaid for her sister. Miss Mary Ives of Salem, a cousin; Mrs. J. Manton Bradley and Miss Ruth Blake of Weston, Miss Elizabeth Loder of Brookline and Miss Ellen DeNormandie of Lincoln will complete the bevy of bridal attendants.

* * *

Mr. Elwell has asked his brother, Mr. William P. Elwell, to be his best man and the large usher corps will include the Messrs. Robert N. Elwell, Frederick M. Ives, Jr., Robert S. Hurlburt, Edmund Keville, George Bartol, Isaac Patch, Gage Bailey and Robert M. Whittemore.

Miss Ives is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Manley Ives of Winchester, at whose home the wedding reception will be held. Following their wedding trip the young couple will be at home in Weston.

* * *

The Harvard Freshman Jubilee dance will be held Friday evening, May 25 in the Harvard Union. The committee for this festive party consists of William B. Schmidt, 2nd, chairman; Curtis Prout vice-chairman; Samuel Adams, George S. Ford, James B. Hallett, George G. Hedblom, Robert C. Holcombe, Herbert Jacques, Jr., Malcolm B. McTernen, Jr., R. Gifford Pedrick, Nelson B. Pell, Edward B. Simmons, Richard MacC. Walsh, Robert Watson, Townsend U. Weeks and Leavitt S. White.

Wedding Bells Chimed Today For Miss O'Hearn, of Milton

WEDDING BELLS chimed today for Miss Mary O'Hearn, of Milton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Hearn, when her wedding to Mr. William Casey, of Dorchester, was held at St. Angela's Church, in Mattapan, at 10 o'clock.

* * *

White lilies against tall cedars formed the decoration at the church, interspersed with delphinium and acacia and a socially prominent gathering of Greater Bostonians will attend.

Miss O'Hearn selected the traditional white satin and alencon lace for her bridal gown, with which she wore a cap of lace and veil of tulle. White lilies of the valley and white orchids were the bridal bouquet, in shower effect.

As matron of honor, her sister, Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr., was gowned in the newest spring fabric, white horsehair lace with white lace picture hat and bouquet of lilies and blue delphinium. Carrying out the all white wedding suggestion, five bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Woodbury of Brookline; Miss Dorothy Lynch of Milton; Miss Marie Gallagher of Quincy; Miss Dorothy Quincy of Newton and Miss Helen Finnegan of Jamaica Plain wore white horsehair lace and large hats with a contrast of yellow acacia in their flowers of white and blue.

Edward O'Hearn of Milton, brother of the bride served Mr. Casey as best man and an usher group included Dr. Peter Dentsen, John F. Fitzgerald, Jr., Haskell Casey, Dr. Edward Morrisey, Joseph A. Parks, Jr., and Hillary Moore.

Miss O'Hearn is a popular member of the Ace of Clubs and Cecilian Guild and graduated from Miss Wheelock's School in Boston. Mr. Casey is the son of former United States District Attorney, the late John H. Casey. He is a graduate of Boston College and Boston University School of Law.

H. B. Warner Brilliant Star of "Sorrell and Son," New Film at Loew's State

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Sorrell and Son" again rejoices in the vigor of screen life for the characters of Warwick Deeping's pen masterpiece. In the version of some years ago it smacked a homer into being accounted of the best films of its year. Again it wins honor—it so happens that H. B. Warner is once more the star, but the rest of the cast is different, although just as capable.

* * *

If anything the new film is even more faithful to the script than its American predecessor, which had, as you will recall, Alice Joyce for leading lady, and Herbert Brenon for director. This picture at the State catches closely the spirit and scope of the novel, and the work of Warner is simply brilliant. Always one of the screen's first males, he is here a true star of acting.

H. B. Warner

The story has to do with Capt. Sorrell, who, when misfortune haunts him after the war, is deserted by his wife and left with the care of his young son, Kit. Ill luck attends his every quest for a job and finally he tells the youngster the exact situation. As a porter in a cheap hotel he has to endure insults and misery because he spurns the advances of its proprietress. Later, he becomes a second porter in a new hotel, but here, too, he must put up with all maner of hardships heaped on him by a bullying ex-sergeant who is head porter and who sees to it that Sorrell does all the work but that he receives no tips.

However, for the sake of Kit, who continues to study, he will not admit defeat. A chance meeting of Kit and a great surgeon imbues the lad with the desire to be a doctor, and with Sorrell's faith and hard earned money, he succeeds. The father attends his son's first operation but soon after collapses. From this point on the story is filled with the deep, intense affection felt for each other by the two, all of which leads to a powerful climax.

* * *

Sharing laurels with Warner is Hugh Williams, as the grown-up Kit, an excellent actor since brought to Hollywood. Winifred Shotte, as Molly, Margot Grahame as Dora, and Donald Calthorp as Dr. Orange, are other shining lights among the players.

In addition, the State has Leo Weber with a new organ program, and very popular, Mickey Mouse in "Camping Out," "Trick Golf," a musical in "Apple to You," and the latest Hearst Metrotone News.

Thurston, Once Lone Wolf Has Entire Company

Howard Thurston, at the Metropolitan, once again proves himself the master illusionist. In other days he was a one-man show, all in himself; as generous of his skill and tricks as ever—some of them brand new feats of magic—he is now surrounded by a company which takes on all the pretensions of a revue. So the Thurston skill sets a gala pace for an outstanding bill that has Bing Crosby on the silver sheet, and the theater's ballet and orchestra in a de luxe stage number.

The wizard Thurston, Merlin of all modern Merlins, not only packed the house, but royally entertained the audience when this department "caught" the show, yesterday afternoon. One notes the presence of his very attractive and versatilely capable daughter, Jane (a chip off the old block in the matter of skill to deceive with neat Circean stunts). To her the father surrenders the stage for a spell, and she handles the situation like an adept at showmanship (her Dad long ago learned that art from A to Izzard.

Howard Thurston

Thurston puts on a long show, and a perfect show. He knows how—he mixes humor, abundantly, so the laughs are many; and the thrills occur during suspenseful periods in which he may be seemingly slicing a fair lady into two or more portions; bringing things live and inanimate from the most surprising places, and doing things in general that completely baffle the audience apparently, and this writer, confessedly.

Highlights are many—the floating woman, excellent levitation; his upside-down stunt; "seeing through a woman"; the canary and the lamp, the transfer of a lass from a cage to a box high over your head, beautifully done "floating ball."

It is all mystifying, and amazingly entertaining, so Thurston may be lauded as the perfect showman.

* * *

"We're Not Dressing" is the film feature and its audience value is aces. First, there is Bing Crosby, singing so many songs (all to the queen's taste, too), that this writer lost count (but losing no liking for Bing's frequent tones). Some of these ditties look like sure-fire "hits." There is Carole Lombard, looking gorgeous and doing finely as the rich owner of a yacht on which the tenor has signed on as sailor-boy. And for the gayest sort of comedy, there are Leon Errol, with his misbehaving legs, and George Burns and Gracie Allen.

If you're asking me, I'll say that Miss Allen and lively Leon are the real stars on this production. Its nonsensical passages are its best, being funniest—but of course the Crosby fans will simply dote upon their favorite's many songs.

Ethel Merman is in the show, too, and sings most pleasingly.

* * *

Not the least of the program features, by any means, is the ballet's work in a colorful number, "Let's Fall in Love," with the orchestra and voices, assisting.

H. S.

Opens Today

With a cast, headed by the beautiful Evelyn Laye, "Waltz Time" opens at the Tremont theater today. The picture is an adaptation of Johann Strauss' operetta, "The Bat," and is filled with tuneful music and beautiful songs including "Waltz Time in Vienna" and the always popular "Blue Danube."

With Miss Laye, best remembered for her appearance in "Bitter Sweet," are to be found Fritz Schultz, opera star, Jay Laurier, Frank Titterton and Gina Malo.

Performances at the Tremont will be continuous and at popular prices with no reserved seats.

VET TESTS LOSS OF CITY JOB

The first court test case of Mayor Mansfield's economy campaign came up today when a disabled war veteran, removed on March 29 from the building department, filed his appeal in South Boston court.

The veteran, Joseph D. Twomey, of Bolton st., South Boston, alleges that the action of Building Commissioner Edward W. Remer in suspending him indefinitely, was illegal. Twomey contends in his petition, that as a disabled veteran, under Civil Service, he has preference over all others. He asks the court to reverse Roemer's decision and reinstate him to his position without loss of pay.

Twomey, employed as a zoning inspector, was suspended with 33 other inspectors after Roemer received orders from the mayor to effect economies in his department.

Otto Kruger Thrills As Star in 'The Crime Doctor,' RKO Boston Film

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"The Crime Doctor" and "Finishing School" came to screen yesterday to mark the switching of the RKO Keith-Boston Theater to an all-film feature policy for the summer. Both new pictures are interesting, and the first of the two has (as a star of the first magnitude) that excellent, all-round actor, Otto Kruger.

So the movie packs plenty of entertainment, leaving the lighter side to "Finishing School," which has Frances Dee for its principal luminary.

* * *

The Kruger film is a deftly concocted blend of mystery thriller, with the punch of a good "love triangle." Perhaps you know the plot of this Israel Zangwill story; Kruger is the famous detective whose wife (Karen Morley) has fallen under the romantic spell of Nils Asther. Spurred by jealousy, Kruger has her watched, and labors to weave a web of evidence about his rival to hang a murder charge at his door.

The sleuth succeeds, but his spouse refuses to accept his evidence. She is willing to die to save the man she truly loves. The detective solves the problem of his own weaving by suicide.

But that isn't the finish by any means—there's a grand "kick" to this highly suspenseful film tale. In an ingenious way it develops a swell surprise for an anti-climax that relieves all that taut, tense feeling of a wondrously acted and directed theme. Rather than give the secret away, we shall leave it to be enjoyed as we did yesterday.

* * *

Kruger has long merited stardom, and is just about perfect in his best role to date. Miss Morley is splendid, Asther convincing, and excellent aid is contributed by Judith Wood, William Frawley, and F. Farrell MacDonald. A good job can be credited to Director John Robertson.

"Finishing School" is the cinema in lighter vein. Miss Dee is sent away to school by her socially ambitious Ma (Billie Burke), and adopts as her pal a jazzy lass played by Ginger Rogers. Bruce Cabot is the admirer, and the complications are perilous, but everything is worked out happily.

Best of them all, I liked Miss Rogers and Miss Burke, with John Halliday as usual superb, though his role is minor. Miss Dee is very fetching as the heroine.

TELETYPE TO CONN. DROPPED

Teletype service between the Massachusetts and Connecticut state police was discontinued last Thursday night, it was learned at the State House today.

Officials of the state police stated they dropped the Connecticut service because the registrar of motor of that state has taken over the handling of teletypes from the police.

It is understood that state police here have had great difficulty in getting information from the Connecticut state police. Repeated delays in answer to inquiries have made the service useless, it was said. It was also said that the New York state police have had difficulties with the Connecticut teletype system.

Friends of Gen. Charles H. Cole of Boston, YD veteran, are working actively to line up Democratic delegates to the June Worcester convention to support him for governor, it was learned today.

Gen. Cole, it is believed by many, will have the support of U. S. Senator David I. Walsh and Gov. Ely.

STRIKE LOOMS IN 3 CITIES

A general strike of leather workers, starting Monday, in Lynn, Salem, Peabody, Danvers and Woburn threatened today.

The step became known following the announcement that members of the Massachusetts Leather Manufacturers' Association had refused to sign the agreement between the workers and manufacturers as drawn up by the regional labor board.

Raymond S. Roberts, secretary of the manufacturers' association, stated that action on signing the agreement was postponed because workers had placed a demand for a 25 per cent wage increase to the manufacturers.

Roberts added that the manufacturers would not sign the agreement unless the wage increase demand is withdrawn. He declared that there was no wage increase provided for in the agreement drawn up by the regional board.

Union officials stated today that a mass meeting would be held in Salem tomorrow night to take officials action on the calling to the strike.

READING-WRITING

Aldous Huxley's Central American Travels

By WILLIAM SOSKIN

WE have grown so thoroughly accustomed to the tart skepticism and the originality of Aldous Huxley's writings that we have come to expect some sort of mental titillation from him no matter what he essays. That is a little hard on the author of Antic Hay, Point Counter Point and Brave New World, particularly in his more informal and relaxed moments.

Mr. Huxley compiles an anthology of some of his favorite poetry and he feels that he must include a few iconoclastic bits and a tincture of blasphemy against the poetic traditions that will shock the boobocracy. He takes a trip through Central America, through British Honduras, Guatemala and Mexico, and he finds it necessary to pepper his journey with discerning essays on primitives, paleontology, war, peace, modern ethics, anthropology and Dr. Pavloff. No Huxley work is complete without a liberal helping of Dr. Pavloff and his dogs and his conditioned reflexes.

I am not complaining. I find Mr. Huxley's travel diary, Beyond the Mexique Bay, an entertaining book. I am merely sympathizing with the man who probably would enjoy going places without the eternal necessity to make "copy" out of his every day's reactions to the world.

* * *

THE most tonic quality in Mr. Huxley's record is his refusal to be taken in by the dark gods and the peasant quaintness which so many travelers among the Central American Indians have hymned. Indeed, he makes a point of refuting some of the popular reports that have come to us.

Mr. Stuart Chase is prominent among the Americans who returned from Mexico with manuscripts about the lovely arts and the idyllic life of the Mexican Indians. Mr. Huxley looks at the arts-and-crafts shop which excited Mr. Chase more than any art museum, and suggests that if it is so Mr. Chase "is wholly without a feeling for aesthetic values . . . a man to whom nature has denied all sense of the qualitative difference between things."

Why, then, does a man of Mr. Chase's intelligence bring us such reports? Probably because, says Mr. Huxley, he is carried away with the sociological aspect of the native's craftsmanship. Mr. Chase, saturated with Zenith, Middletown and the machine age, finds Indian craftsmen playing at work and living simply and never starving. He therefore accepts their blankets and lacquer bowls as beautiful.

* * *

OFTEN Mr. Huxley will note the name of a place he visits, and then calmly proceed to write about Hitler or England, ignoring his environment completely. I like that. It is silly to assume that a place is worth writing about just because you happen to be there.

That informality results in a wide variety of topical essays. In Trinidad he hears an astonishing Negro orchestra and some singers chanting:

Oh, wouldn't it be-ee
A good thing if we-ee
Supported lo-cull industree!

In Caracas he finds female sophisticates, with mauve powder on dark noses and heels very high. Mayan architecture he finds extremely inorganic, and that leads to an essay on Indian (Oriental) art, which is essentially sexual. Then Mr. Huxley takes up the question of whether any art may be considered as racial, and he comes to the conclusion that a "racial" characteristic of an art is often determined by pure chance.

The copper-colored beauty of the Creoles in Guatemala City fascinates him—"a strange beauty, and for some reason extraordinarily fragile-looking and precarious, as though it were on the verge of disappearing." The soldiers of this city lead him to speculate on war and on the emotional reasons for people's capitulation to war.

Life under a machine civilization or in any routine, Mr. Huxley believes, is a matter of so much boredom within the routine followed by orgy. The orgy provides the escape. Routine makes the fatigue of thought unnecessary and relieves men of responsibility.

MORE ITEMS:

The editorial carelessness of the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica . . . The difficulty of painting a brilliant, vivid landscape without having it seem garish and loud . . . Atitlan, which is too much of a good thing in scenic splendor, and which makes one long for quiet English country . . . The effectiveness of German advertising in Mexico where commercial products are tied up with religious symbols, just as cigarettes in America are associated with ladies' arm-pits and legs . . . The Nazi movement as an irrational, emotional conviction of one's rightness and other people's wrongness . . . Oh, there are many neat little prizes in Mr. Huxley's newest grab-bag.

The Little Alley Houses

THE little alley houses
  Cuddle closely down
With window flowers and babies
  And paint pots, blue and brown.
The clock man and the peddler
  Parley at their gates
And in the chilly dusks
  Hearth fires light the grates
The little alley houses
  Eat their humble pie
In such a happy fashion
  We envy—riding by.

David and Goliath

BY FRANK SULLIVAN

A FEW days ago I saw a full-grown barber get his comeuppance, conversationally, from a customer, aged four, name of Joey.

Joey came into the barber shop with his mother and was planted in the chair next to mine.

"Shave?" the barber asked him, whimsically.

"I'm too young to shave," Joey said, looking at him gravely. The barber continued, innocent of the rapids that lay ahead.

"Well, what's your name, young fellow?" he asked, brandishing the scissors.

"Joey," said Joey, "I am four years old. I'll be five in June."

"Say, you're a pretty fine boy for five years old," said the barber, pleasantly.

Joey accepted the tribute without comment.

"Do you want me to hold my head down?" he asked the barber.

"Not yet. I'll tell you when."

"The last man that cut my hair said for me to hold my head down."

"I'll tell you when."

* * *

THERE was the merest note of apprehension in the barber's voice.

"Do many little boys like me come in here to have their hairs cut?" asked Joey.

"Hair cut, Joey, not hairs," corrected his mother.

"Oh, yes, a good many, off and on," said the barber.

"Is any of them a little boy named Jay from Sixty-third street?"

"I don't seem to place him. A lot of little boys come in here, but I don't seem to place him. Now, you just stay quiet . . . "

"He's four years old, too."

"Just your age, then, isn't he. Now, just hold . . ."

"Do any little boys about four years old from Sixty-third street come in here to have their hairs cut?"

"Now Joey, you've talked enough," said his mother.

* * *

"LOTS of little boys come in," the barber explained, "but I don't know as they live on Sixty-third street."

"That's where Jay lives," Joey explained. "I live on Sixty-first. Will you cut my hair so it'll grow straight back?"

"Well, you see, you're pretty young for that, Joey. You just leave it to me."

"When I'm older, will you?"

The barber tried silence.

"When you're older I'll cut it any way you want. Now just be a little man and sit quiet . . ."

"Joey, don't squirm," commanded his mother.

"Jay is going to have his hair cut straight back," Joey announced.

"Is he?" commented the barber, politely.

"Yes. Why do you have to have two pairs of scissors?"

"Oh, to cut little boys' hair with."

Joey was unimpressed by this banter.

"But you can only cut my hair with one pair at once."

"Now, Joey, you just sit quiet . . ."

"Then why do you have two?"

* * *

"JOEY! You've talked enough now." said his mother much as she might have said: "Niagara Falls! You've fallen enough, now."

The barber was trimming Joey's bang.

"Shall I shut my eyes now so the hair won't get into them? The hairs got into my eyes once when I didn't shut them."

"Yes, shut your eyes, and you better keep your mouth closed for a while, Joey."

"Why?"

"Well, the hairs might get into your mouth, too, you know."

"Will I swallow them if they get into my mouth?"

"Certainly."

"Will they make me sick if I swallow them?"

"Oh yes. Now just . . ."

"Will I have to go to bed?"

"Joey!" said mother.

* * *

JUST then Joey's eye caught sight of my poll, which was crowned by a halo of white shampoo foam that made me look like Judge Landis on a windy day.

"What is that man . . ." Joey began, when suddenly his barber whisked off the towel with a flourish of relief, and said, "Now, there we are." Joey departed, saying to his mother. "Where are we going now? Can we go to the zoo? Can we go to the news reel? Can I have ice cream after"

The barber leaned weakly against the chair, mopped his brow, and whistled softly.

"Quite a chaterbox," he remarked, to nobody in particular.

LETTERS I WOULD LOVE TO MAIL

By* J. P. McEVOY

Student,
Columbia School of Journalism,
New York City.

Dear Student:

I HARDLY know where to start answering all your questions. Like the Elephant's Child, you are so full of satiable curiosity. Perhaps I shall take only one. Or maybe two.

Let's see. You want to know how to go about selling stories to the movies. Well, I would say yes and no. Do good writers sell bad stories? Yes. Do bad writers sell good stories? Yes. Do good stories turn into bad stories and vice versa? Yes and no. Do bad writers turn into good writers and good writers into bad stories and good stories into bad writers? Yes.

Is everything you have ever heard about Hollywood true? Yes, everything. And a lot of things you haven't heard. Would I advise you to write for the movies? No. Do I think you could? Yes. Can anybody? Yes. Do you need any experience? No. Do you need a lot of experience? Yes.

* * *

HOW is a story bought and why? Because it has a good plot, or no plot but a good title, or no title but good characters, or none of these but the writer is well known, or maybe has never been heard of. Because it was a play in Budapest and failed in Paris but had a run in London and failed in New York. Because it couldn't get produced. Because it has a lot of characters. Because it has only one. Because it won a prize. Because it is so terrible it was closed the first night.

Because it is very funny, but with a little rewriting would make a good tragedy or vice versa. Because there are a couple of spots in it for musical numbers. Because you couldn't pry a musical number into it without tearing it apart. Because it would be such fun to tear it apart and wedge some numbers into it, anyway. Because, after that is done, all the numbers can be cut out and the whole thing can be chopped into two reelers.

* * *

WILL a course in journalism help you in writing for the movies? Yes. So will a course in window trimming, landscape gardening, making artificial ice or ten years' experience in a lighthouse. Digging clams is good, too, or designing hats or running a ferry boat.

Some of the best movie writers have graduated from chain gangs, boards of aldermen, the American Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Professor Baker's. Some have been writing for forty years, some for forty minutes, some never did, more never will. A course in journalism will do you no more harm than a course in seed catalogue writing.

In short, writing for the movies has everything to do with writing and nothing. Years of experience as a writer may help you or may ruin you. You can learn all about it in a month, or you can spend a life time at it and learn nothing.

It bears the same relation to writing as walking a tight rope bears to acting. You can act while on a tight rope, or just walk, but either way it's a trick. Some can never learn to walk a tight rope, although they've been walking all their lives. Others can do it right off.

I hope I have helped you. Ask me about journalism some time.

Candidly,

J. P. McEVOY.

How I Spread Happiness

IT is in serving others
  That people find most joy;
It makes one happy as a child
  Who has a brand new toy.
A little act of kindness,
  A little deed well done
For someone else makes people glad
  And is a lot of fun.
  The pleasure's in the giving;
  The gift is not the thing;
Performing tasks for others
  Its own reward will bring.
I want to make folks happy,
  As happy as can be;
That's why I'm always asking them
  To go do things for me.

PEOPLE'S OPIUM

Lenin Got It the Wrong Way Round

Says* G. K. CHESTERTON

LONDON.—Lenin said that religion is the opium of the people. This profound remark will readily explain the sleepy submission, the supine placidity, the dull and drowsy obedience of the Irish people; as compared with the wild revolutionary frenzy, the incessant insurrection and revolt, the bloody riots and endless street-battles of the English people.

Nobody can doubt that Ireland is passionately religious; and especially that the Irish populace is passionately religious. It therefore follows, by the strict logic of Lenin, that the Irish populace has always been particularly patient and subservient and contented.

Nobody who has lived in England all his life, as I have, can doubt that modern England, with its many manly and generous virtues, has become largely indifferent to religion. It follows therefore, by the strict logic of Lenin, that the English are the best Bolshevists in the world. To suppose anything else would be to indulge in the audacity, nay the blasphemy, of supposing that there is something wrong in the logic of Lenin.

We must therefore believe, as best we can, that the Irishman has always been a tame and timid person; and that it is the Englishman who has always been "agin the Government." The inference is that it is only by believing in God that we could possibly believe in the Government.

* * *

BUT the truth is that it is only by believing in God that we can ever criticize the Government. Once abolish the God, and the Government becomes the God. That fact is written all across human history; but it is written most plainly across the recent history of Russia; which was created by Lenin. There the Government is the God, and all the more the God, because it proclaims aloud in accents of thunder, like every other God worth worshipping, the one essential commandment: "Thou shalt have no other gods but Me."

Lenin only fell into a slight error, he only got it the wrong way round. The truth is that Irreligion is the opium of the people. Wherever the people do not believe in something beyond the world, they will worship the world. And, by the very nature of the Bolshevist and many other modern systems, as well as by the practical working of almost any system, the State will be the strongest thing in the world.

The whole tendency of men is to treat the solitary State as the solitary standard. That men may protest against law, it is necessary that they should leave injustice; that they may believe in a justice beyond law, it is necessary that they should believe in a justice beyond the land of living men. You can impose the rule of the Bolshevist as you can impose the rule of the Bourbons; but it is equally an imposition. You can even make its subjects contented, as opium would make them contented.

But if you are to have anything like divine discontent, then it must really be divine. Anything that really comes from below must really come from above.

The Higher the Fewer

IT may be in Prof. Einstein's bean
That two and two will often mean
Three, seven, twelve or seventeen
  (The mathematics vary)
But, practically, as of yore
The sum of Two and Two is Four,
It never will be less or more
    For Thee
    Or Me
Or Tom and Dick and Harry!
It may be that the Superman
Constructed on Prof. Nietzche's plan
Need worry at no mortal ban,
    But folk more ordinary
Will mostly find it just as well
Within the legal code to dwell
And thus avoid a gloomy cell
Such as the judges might decree
    For Me
    Or Thee
Or Tom and Dick and Harry!
In theory the Master Mind
Is one no laws or rules can bind
But even Supermen will find
    It's wise to be chary
Of making Two and Two too much,
And flouting Decalogues and such,
Or they will find themselves in dutch,
    As We Might be,
Yes, Thee and Me
And Tom and Dick and Harry!

ALLOW ME TO SAY

Enriching One's Life by Fads and Hobbies

By* C. HANSON TOWNE

A LITTLE while ago I wrote something here about the hidden talents that many of us possess, if only we would develop them.

Several letters have come to me, and one lady is grateful for the suggestion. She put her thinking-cap on, and decided that, though she has devoted herself to the world of business—she is an executive in an advertising agency—she has a distinct talent for languages. She has always been a good mimic, she tells me, and the little French she had at school has stood her in good stead in giving imitations of governesses and nurses. Now she has seriously engaged a French teacher, and within a few weeks has been able to read that lovely language quite fluently; but, of course, she had the groundwork

From French she will go to German, and perhaps Italian in time. She has taken lodgings with a French family and outside office hours speaks only to them in their native tongue. Her progress has been most satisfactory, and she only regrets that she did not think of following this course long ago. She will find that a knowledge of another language will help her immeasurably in her daily work.

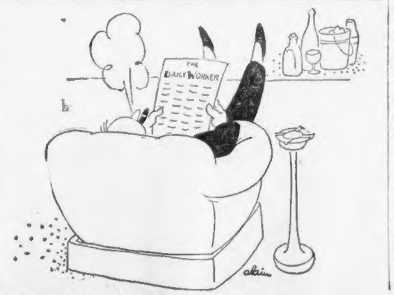
* * *

I HAVE just come from an exhibition of paintings by another young writer who, until recently, had never even thought of taking a brush in his hand. His work reveals skill and more than ordinary intelligence. He has imagination, and a true sense of color, and I am amazed at his achievement. His only danger may lie in coming to believe that he is an artist first, and a writer afterward.

Eugene Speicher, the painter, told me not long ago that he thought it a laudable ambition for anyone to wish to draw, and even to attempt landscape painting and portraits. As a hobby this is an admirable thing to do. But the neophyte must not take himself too seriously, unless there is a basic wish to make painting one's life work. It is one thing to attempt to interpret Nature on canvas, and quite another to draw the human form. All one's limitations are shown up in the latter process. There are pitfalls that must be conquered; just as one might be a good essayist or poet, and have no gift for fiction writing.

Yet it is astonishing to observe what can be achieved. One's life is richer for such a fad, if you care to call it that. The banker or stockbroker who turns to art as a release from his difficult problems may not be a better banker or stockbroker because of his sudden realization that there is something else in life besides figures, but he will have a more interesting existence, and no harm will have been done.

For example, I am certain that I never could be a toe-dancer. I'm not built for so difficult a profession! It is wiser to keep one's feet firmly on the ground. In my own case, I'm sure that's what I should do. Besides, I never did like toe-dancing; so I'm not in any danger.



NEW BLOOD

Everybody Is a Snob; Why Worry About It?

GERTRUDE ATHERTON

IN a previous article I alluded to the depressing appearance of the famous "horseshoe" of the Metropolitan Opera House during the era of short hair and truncated skirts. For nearly a quarter of a century that glittering horseshoe had been famous all over the world, and so were many of the women who sat there on fashionable nights. Visitors to New York would buy seats in other parts of the house to stare at the socially famous — and the beauties."

Gertrude Atherton

The whole point is that in those days every dowager and many of the younger matrons wore a glittering tiara, and plastered their often ample fronts with jewels as far as the waist line. As for the girls, although their jewels may have been confined to a string of pearls, they wore gowns that resembled nothing less than sublimated sports clothes. Some of the elder women were fat, some were long, lean and hawk-like of feature, but their backs were straight and their tiaras were firmly imbedded in the proper coiffure.

* * *

IT was not a democratic sight, I grant you, but I don't care a hang about democracy and never did. And while poverty, like war, is a disgrace to civilization and should be abolished from the face of the earth, there should always be classes, for they give color to life. But there is no reason why the upper stratum should be inhabited only by families of long descent; that would be manifestly unfair, moreover impossible in this world of change; no matter how often we swing backward we still go on.

If the plumber of today is the opera boxholder of tomorrow, and if energy, ambition, and some special gift elevate more and more of the middle class to the top, so much the better. The rise to fame and fortune from humble beginnings constitutes the chief claim of this country to romance. Besides, old blood grows thin. And why worry about snobbery? It is one of the by-products of success; moreover, in one form or another, it exists in every human being.

* * *

SOME of those opera boxes were sold during the long depression; no doubt many of the jewels were sold or pawned. It is to be hoped that the new owners will hang jewels on their women and the old ones will either be able to buy others or get the family heirlooms out of pawn. For jewels are among the beautiful things of life and should not only be worn but shared with the public. If no one can as yet buy real diamonds, imitations make quite a dazzlement, and as for emeralds, they look like glass anyhow. But let the old horseshoe revive as much of its former glory as possible.

What might be called the new proletariat fans are very obtuse. In their zeal to see justice done (or to be called intellectuals) they overlook the fact that the wealth in the top stratum has always been a spur to ambition and that reading about and seeing rich and famous persons even at a distance has always been one of the chief amusements of the poor.

VAGABONDIA

Mr. and Mrs. Bernadotte Complete the Circle

By* BRUNO LESSING

ROME.—When we were in Naples and I didn't know what to do to kill time it occurred to me to go on board the Conte di Savoia and have a drink and a chat with Capt. Cavallini. The only error in my calculation was that I thought it was Wednesday, whereas it was Tuesday. The Conte di Savoia had not arrived. I'm almost as hopeless regarding the days of the week as I am with the days of the month. It was only last week that I definitely quit dating letters "1933." But all that is neither here nor there.

I said to Rene, "Do you think you can find the Conte di Savoria?" And he grinned and said, "O. K." Which gave me quite a thrill. Rene is the Frenchiest chauffeur that ever came out of France and I never suspected that he knew a word of English. And now, thought I, he has picked up a bit of American slang.

* * *

ANYWAY, we got to the dock where the Conte di Savoia would have been if she had been in Naples, but where she wasn't. So I returned to the hotel and said to Rene, "I'm going to take a nap for an hour. Then we'll drive to Posilipo to see Virgil's tomb."

When I came down, sleepily, I got into the car and said, "O. K." As long as Rene had made a start in English I wanted to encourage him. I shut my eyes, paying no attention to where he was driving and, am afraid, dozed off a bit. When the car stopped I found we were back at the dock where the Conte di Savoia should have been—if she had been there. And they didn't bury Virgil on a dock. So I said, "What the devil?" And Rene, also looking surprised, said, "We have arrived."

"But I said I wanted to go to Posilipo."

Rene actually looked bewildered. "But Monsieur said 'O. K.'" he insisted. For a moment I didn't know whether I was asleep or awake or whether all the foundations of sanity had crumbled. And then, luckily, came light; first, a tiny glimmer and then a constellation of suns.

Rene hadn't the faintest idea what O. K. means. What he had said was "au quai," the French for "at the quay" or "at the wharf." The most natural place in the world to go if you're looking for a ship. And it is one of the few French phrases whose pronunciation can be accurately reproduced in English. It's just "O. K."

"To Posilipo," I said. And now I'm sure Rene thinks I'm nutty.

* * *

WELL, supposing I am nutty. What of it? Do you imagine that I am lonesome? List, list, O list! I'll tell you a better joke.

On the road to Naples we passed through the little town of Ponte Corvo. When Napoleon conquered Italy he doled out cities and provinces to his friends and favorites just as a political leader doles out jobs. He turned Ponte Corvo over to a chap named Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte whom he had already made a marshal of France. Jean was a common soldier but very bright, who had worked his way up in the army. As Prince of Ponte Corvo he became a spectacular figure.

When the time came to provide an heir to the throne of Sweden, Napoleon put Jean into the job. And Jean, a commoner and hired solider, became the founder of the present royal house of Sweden.

"There's such divinity doth hedge a king!" says Shakespeare.

"Myself—und Gott!" wrote McGregor. Rose, about kings.

There's just as much divinity about kings as there is about barbers. Less, probably, because you shudder when you think what a barber could do to you.

* * *

WELL, one thing led to another, and King Jean was succeeded by a line of other kings. The latest one in the picture is the present King of Sweden. They say he is a fine monarch, especially as a tennis player. His son, the Crown Prince, who, also by the grace of God, will be king, has a son called Prince Sigvard. Until quite recently Sigvard had royal blood in his veins and was different from the common herd. But he fell in love with a girl who had nothing in her favor but youth, good looks and intelligence. Not a single drop of royal blood in her veins. The poor girl's blood was merely healthy.

As a punishment Sigvard was disowned by the royal house of Sweden.

The couple were married in London. They wanted to travel abroad and needed a passport. They applied to the Swedish embassy. They received a passport made out for "Mr. and Mrs. Bernadotte." So, now, they have landed where Jean Bernadotte, the founder of the royal house, began. Sigvard has caught up with his ancestor. A rare achievement for a modern youth.

* * *

I WENT to a restaurant in Cannes for dinner one night and, would you believe it, they wouldn't serve me until the King of Sweden arrived. I was hungry, too. After His Majesty (that's another joke) arrived, amid applause, I was served with the last meal I'll ever take in that dump.

If I ever run across Mr. Bernadotte I'll be tickled to death if he'll let me blow off the champagne and let me tell him what a joke on humanity the King business has always been.

HATS OFF, YOU MUGGS!

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

Mr. Arthur Aull.
Lamar, Mo.
Dear Sir:

Having read a story of Mrs. Elton Hoobler, of Waynesburg, Ohio, making a quilt of 8,065 blocks, I am sending in a description of a quilt I have completed. Am glad Ohio woman can't get a head of the Missouri women, in quilt making. I finished in 8 months a quilt containing 8,880 tiny hexagonal blocks, which required 1,100 yards thread to "piece." 1,400 yards in "quilting." having 236 different colored blocks and 2 blocks which are alike, in all 240, using 4½ small rolls of cotton to stuff or raise the colored tiny one-inch blocks.

Can any one find the 2 which are alike? Not an easy job as there hasn't been any one yet who has found them.

And oblige,
Mrs. Edd Ozier.

HOLLYWOOD — Hello there! Dimples Adorable, the blonde star, just called up to tell us she is adopting four more darling baby boys in order to have enough for a Bay Scout Troop. What male star laughed heartily when mistaken for a headwaiter the other night? Quite a controversy has arisen among film colony intellectuals as a result of Director Robert Raxy's statement that "The picture business certainly ain't what it used to be."

Greta Garbo wants us to deny the rumor that she has accepted a position demonstrating elastic exercisers in drug store windows. Bill Blotz, the gag man, had everybody giggling in the studio lunch room the other day; he came in wearing a lady's wig. Due to the success of "Little Women" all the studios of Louisa May Alcott, Universal has just bought the rights to her story, "Little Man, What Now?" The title will be changed to "Little Man, So What?"

Dartmouth Violates the Sacred Code of College Rowing ↕ Green Oarsmen Float a Navy Without Cost, and Sail From Icehouse

By AUSTEN LAKE

There is something dangerously Communistic about the way Dartmouth has launched its new navy on Mascoma pond, N. H., something that strikes at the very taproots of the college social system, sets a rebellious example and threatens the sanctity of a sport that has always been the gewgaw of quality classes, almost, I should say, the aristocracy. For Dartmouth has floated its boats from its own boathouse and has a competent coach, without spending a shilling.

Austen Lake

On the cheap!

This is an impertinent violation of the college rowing code, which calls for a life of Oriental luxury amid lavish quarters, attended by house domestics, officers of protocol, and with summer estates that overlook pearling and sunkissed waters. At Harvard, for instance, it is said that a candidate for crew must first have his veins tapped for blood samples to determine the degree of gentility.

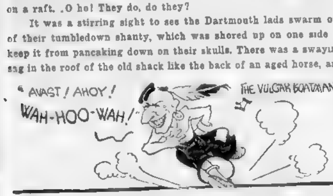
I have heard of one freshman who, wishing to conceal his nouveau riche antecendents, privately underwent a blood transfusion from the arteries of an impoverished patrician, just before reporting to the Newell boathouse. Only the fraud was detected when the blood samples were taken, because the blue corpuscles huddled up in one corner of the miscroscope slide and refused to mingle with the lad's natural red ones. So he was shooed away and made to play football.

Dartmouth Violates All Rowing Traditions

I do not believe all that I hear, but I know that Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia and the rest of the college crews are always shagged around the waters by mahogony launches filled with tutors, flunkies and male nurses, and that the lads are fed sweet breads en casserole, filet mignons and venison haunches. There are always thermos flasks of egg-nog handy and trays of canapes and knitted cozies in case of a chill.

Well then, here comes Dartmouth with a couple of second-hand shells with their bottoms patched, an abandoned ice house on the edge of a wilderness pond, and a tatterdemalion squad of candidates in corduroy breeches. And they go to barefaced rowing, aheaving and ayanking on their hoehandles like ragamuffins on a raft. O ho! They do, do they?

It was a stirring sight to see the Dartmouth lads swarm out of their tumbledown shanty, which was shored up on one side to keep it from pancaking down on their skulls. There was a swaying sag in the roof of the old shack like the back of an aged horse, and inside, where the last ice had melted years ago, the floor was deep in damp sawdust, giving off a dank, cellar odor.



"AVAST! AHOY!
WAH-HOO-WAH!"
THE VULGAR BOATMAN

Mrs. Ernest M. Hopkins, wife of Dartmouth's president, was standing outside and gave the shells a baptismal dousing with water from square, frosted bottles reminiscent of applejack, and then the lads flopped the boats into Mascoma pond, harnessed their feet into floor straps and fitted their stout hams into the little, postage stamp seats.

And finally, Jerry Cross, coxawain of the No. 1 boat, which was chistened Ledyard, after the first Dartmouth man to sail around the world, commanded "Heave ho," and the lads fetched a goshamighty haul on their hoehandles which was like to pull the jiblets out of the boat and set it to teetering so that some of the ship's company let go their poles and snatched for the railing.

Jim Smith Paddles Own Coaching Launch

Well, it was what you might expect, because in the proper college circles you don't just go out brazenly and start to row. You spend the winter indoors in a glass conservatory, sitting snug on a stationary float, with live water running on either side, and pulling to the beat of a symphony orchestra.

There are servants strolling around the runways with tall glasses of mineral water with mint leaves floating on the top, and big mirrors along the walls to throw back your image.

Then upstairs there are lounges and a cordial atmosphere of thick upholstery, with the photos of proud former oarsmen looking down from the walls. You have to sit around in your woollen panties and heavy socks and sing sea-chanties in four-part harmonies. No, you don't just go out and go vulgarly to rowing. Not if you are anybody you don't.

So, after spooning up a little headway, the Dartmouth boats spidered off in a cloud of spray, paced in a single shell by their coach, Jim Smith, a former Englishman with freckles as big as pennies. And every so often Jim would yell across in his Limehouse lisp, and the boys would put on their brakes, gentle down and listen while he said how to streamline their chins and row without digging up kelp.

Fortunately, none of the fleet tipped over, as sometimes happens in the most polite rowing society. Because if they had, there was no mahogeny launch with male nurses to throw over floating mattresses and fish the lads up. And I think, when the crews came sailing home to their ice house again, Rip Hencage, the sports director, felt very relieved to count nine men, including the coxswains, in each boat.

As the boys bedded their shells down on the sawdust floor, it was voted a lot of fun. Though vulgar, declasse fun to be sure.

NEED BREAKS TO REPEAT, SAYS TERRY

By Joe Cashman

Meet Mr. Willyum Terry, the guy with no illusions.

"Sure we'll win the pennant—if we're lucky."

The rain which washed out the opener of the Braves-Giants series was still falling. There was a hint of a smile in Willyum's sharp eyes as he lounged in a lobby chair, an expensive cigar clenched between his teeth.

"This storm isn't too hard to take," he observed. "The Braves couldn't be hotter than they are at the moment, and we won't be any weaker when the postponement is played off on our next visit to town."

Terry may not be the most popular of pilots, except among his players, but egotism certainly isn't one of the faults of the pilot of the world champion New Yorkers.

JACKSON AT PEAK

"We've been very fortunate so far this season," he continued. "The odds were against Travis Jackson ever playing regularly again, and he's back as the greatest shortstop in the majors. Hughie Critz got hurt, and we weren't weakened because Jackson's recovery left "Blondy" Ryan available for second. Paul Richards did a most creditable job filling in back of the plate for Gus Mancuso, who has just returned from a long siege of typhoid fever.

"The loss of Roy Parmalee, who had his appendix removed Thursday, may be a bad blow, but Johnny Salveson, my bespectacled rookie righthander, shows signs of filling the gap left by 'Tarzan.'

"I'm confident the Giants will finish among the first three, but we must keep on getting all the best of the breaks to land the flag. It can't be done otherwise."

STILL FEARS CARDS

Terry opined before the campaign started that the St. Louis Cards were the club to beat in the current race. He still feels the Mound City entry will prove most dangerous, despite its slow start, but he has as much fear of the Cubs and Braves and isn't overlooking the Pirates.

"I thought the loss of Rabbit Maranville would take most of the sting out of the Braves," he admitted. "The club would be stronger with the Rabbit in there, but it's no bargain without him.

"Klein makes the Cubs a real menace. He's shown he can hit outside of the Philly bandbox. If the Cubs can get over their inferiority complex on the road, they'll be tough to lick.

"But while I have Carl Hubbell in perfect health, I'll let the other clubs do all the worrying."

HUBBELL VS. BRANDT

Hubbell, with one shutout to his credit over the Tribe already this season, was to be trotted out to the hill in the belated opener this p. m., weather permitting.

Our Eddie Brandt was groomed to oppose King Carl.

If you ever saw two greater southpaws dueling, you're considerably older than this envoy.

The Braves, yet to suffer their season's first defeat at the Tepee, don't think the Giants can turn the trick even by using Hubbell today and Hal Schumacher tomorrow.

Trailing the second place visitors by only one game, the Warriors expect to leave on their first long road trip tomorrow evening with a clean home slate and occupying the runner-up berth.

Install Light at Toronto Park

Toronto, April 28 (AP)—Floodlights will be installed in the Maple Leaf stadium, home of the Toronto Club of International league, it was announced today. The Leafs probably will play their first night game at Toronto during their second home stay late in June.

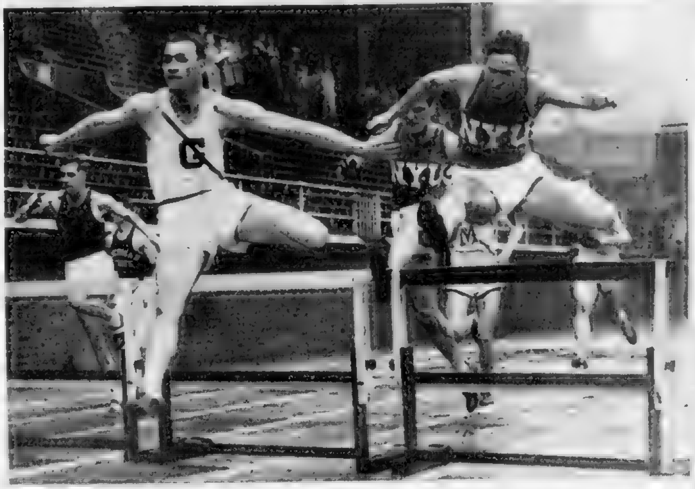
Jinx Follows Dodgers

Philadelphia, April 28 (INS) — Len Koenecke, promising young outfielder, may be lost to the Brooklyn Dodgers for several weeks, it developed today.

Koenecke injured his foot in Boston the other day and an operation will probably be necessary.

Meanwhile, Manager Casey Stengel was bemoaning the news that Joe Stripp, his third baseman, had fractured a small bone in his ankle and would be out of the lineup indefinitely.

Neither Rain Nor Slush Daunts Penn Relay Runners



"Rain" was the theme song of opening day at the Penn Relays, as the collegians splashed around the track. Here Joe Healey of N. Y. U., right, former Mechanic Arts High racer, paddles along a stride back of R. Evans of Geneva in the 400-meter hurdles. Healey fought from the ruck to victory. Evans took second place. Healey's time was 57 and a fraction, very fast under the conditions. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Chuck Hornstobel supplied the big feature of the opening day events when he decisively defeated Bill Bonthron of Princeton on the final half mile leg of the sprint medley relay race. Hornstobel started with a three yard lead and then widened the advantage to six yards at the finish. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

HAMMOND GAINS CONTROL OF GARDEN

New York, April 28 (AP)—Richard F. Hoyt, chairman of the board of directors of Madison Square Garden and one of its largest stockholders, today said before sailing on the liner Rex for a European vacation that he had offered his stock for sale but had not sold it.

"I have left the power to close the deal with my attorney, so that my departure will not affect the negotiations," Hoyt said.

New York, Apr. 28—Col. John Hammond today secured control of the New York Garden when a syndicate headed by him purchased 115,000 shares of the stock of Madison Square Garden Corporation at $7 a share. The stock taken over was held by Richard F. Hoyt and his associates.

Hoyt is a member of the firm of Hayden & Stone with offices here and in Boston.

The deal involved the purchase of stock upon which a value of $805,000 had been placed.

Hoyt and his associates paid $8 a share for the stock at the time Garden was built under the direction of the late Tex Rickard. The latter interested Hoyt in the plan for raising the necessary money.

Col. Hammond was active in the affairs of the Garden up to a few years ago when he split with William F. Carey who at the time was president of the Garden. Carey was generally considered a Hoyt man.

Hoyt and Carey had control of the Garden at the time. Carey was later succeeded by Col. John Reed Kilpatrick as head of the Garden.

Col. Hammond went into the open mraket and began purchasing Garden stock. He was determined to secure control of the stock of the corporation. He realized his ambition when he purchased the stock of Hoyt and his associates.

Hoyt plans to leave on a five weeks trip to Europe and Africa.

Col. Hammond and his syndicate by their purchase also secured control of the Boston Garden. The New York Garden has 80 per cent of the stock of the Boston Garden.

Sox Have Two 'Jockeys' in Werber and Seeds

By Bill Grimes

New York, April 28—After being kept idle a day by rain, the Red Sox are rarin' to clash with the Yankees this afternoon at the Stadium, for Manager Joe McCarthy will send Vernon "Lefty" Gomez to the hill top against them.

Although the Red Sox have [illegible] in exhibition games, Gomez is the only twirler who has gone the entire route against them. They do not underrate the 'Spik' but they question if he will be as effective today as he was at New Fenway Park last Sunday.

Since leaving home the Red Sox have had every other game postponed but I have not heard Manager Bucky Harris [illegible] on the [illegible].

They are smart enough to realize that they are not going to win any pennant, but they do believe they will make it plenty tough for the next American League titleholders.

Accompanying him are Mrs. Maranville, her sister and his nephew, Thomas Stapleton, Jr.

Maranville will see the Senators-Philadelphia game in Washington Sunday and will leave for Rochester immediately afterward, arriving there at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

CUNNINGHAM IN NEW TRY FOR RECORD AT GAMES

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Service Sports Editor

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, April 28—While shifts of workers toiled to dry out the track with blowers in preparation for the Cunningham-Venzke duel, a startling upset was scored in the Pennsylvania relay carnival today when Pete Zaremba, New York University, failed to finish in the money in the hammer throw.

Zaremba, a place winner in the Olympic Games, was fifth behind H. B. Holcomb, Yale; G. W. Miller, West Virginia; G. B. Aaron, Yale, and E. Johnson, Ohio State, in that order, the N. Y. U. man being unable to beat 140 feet.

[illegible]

Holcomb's winning throw was [illegible] feet 9½ inches, excellent in view of the uncertain footing and the brisk temperature, it being an accepted belief that a weight man needs warmth for his best.

The day was clear and the track fairly fast. The early crowd numbered 10,000.

Cornell equalled the carnival record of 1:02 5-10 in winning the first heat of the 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay, with Notre Dame 4 yards back and Yale distanced.

The Navy won the second heat by inches from Pennsylvania in 1:03 8-10, C. Pilcher coming up in the final strides to beat C. Pfeiffer, Pennsylvania, as he died at the wire. Princeton was a close third.

The sun and a cool breeze combined to finish the job of drying out the cinder path, which was a quagmire yesterday and made the use of stop-watches a mere gesture. Although still slow the track looked fit for vastly improved performances, among them a possible attack on the mile mark by Glenn Cunningham of Kansas and his Pennsylvania rival, Gene Venzke.

The summaries:

SPECIAL EVENT

Hammer throw—Won by Herman B. Holcomb, Yale; distance, [illegible] ft. 9½ in.; second, George W. Miller, West Virginia, [illegible]; third, G. B. Aaron, Yale, [illegible]; fourth, E. Johnson, Ohio State, [illegible].

480-YARD SHUTTLE HURDLE

(Preliminary heats, two in each qualify for finals)

First Heat—Won by Cornell (F. J. Irving, J. A. Bennet, O. L. Hilmer, W. S. Merwin); second, Notre Dame; third, Yale. Time, 1:02.5. (Equals Penn relays record set by Ohio State 1932.)

Second Heat—Won by Navy (G. R. Nichol, D. A. Wrigley, F. M. Whitaker, C. Pilcher); second, Pennsylvania; third, Princeton. Time, 1:03.8.

HIGH SCHOOLS

Sixteenth Race—Won by McKinley Tech, Washington, D. C.; second, Evander Childs, N. Y. C.; third, Haverhill, Mass.; fourth, Lansdowne, Pa.; fifth, West Philadelphia Catholics; sixth, Englewood, N. J. Time, 3:33.8.

HARVARD LOOKS EASY WINNER OF MEET

The Greater Boston Intercollegiate track meet, which was to include only the finals and a few scattered semifinals at the Harvard Stadium this afternoon, will be overburdened with events carried over from the first day because of the high wind and rain.

Despite the elements Harvard showed strength and balance and will have an easy time winning first honors. The Crimson is leading in the varsity competition with 17 qualifiers. Boston College is second with 10. M. I. T. and Northeastern tied for third with 8 apiece.

The Crimson freshmen scored 27 points in four events and placed nine men in three others. Tech had 19 points and 7 qualifiers, Northeastern 8 points and 2 qualifiers, and Boston College, 5 points and two qualifiers.

Three Northeastern athletes will play a large part in determining who will place second to Harvard even though the Huskies do not figure themselves strong enough to claim runnerup honors. The three men are Al Hakanson, Dick [illegible] and Gus Milbrandt.

DICK DUNN, who operates the Sharkey A. A. here and the Quincy Arena in Quincy, is planning to stage boxing in Fall River. And believes there is more chance of making money promoting boxing in the small cities and towns than there is in Boston where the overhead eats up the receipts.

EDDIE MACK is considering opening a tavern here. He has been promised the financial aid of Lou Smith, owner of Rockingham Park and Epsom Downs.

ERNIE OFFERS FORFEIT FOR TITLE GO

By Jack Conway

[illegible] Dusek today demanded a bout with Ed Don George for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship as a result of his victory over Henri DeGlane at the Garden, witnessed by a crowd of [illegible].

"I am prepared to post a forfeit of $10,000 to bind a title contest with George," declared the colorful Dusek. "I licked George in our last bout only to be deprived of the title by an unfair decision. The public, I feel, will back me in my campaign against the champion. Let George sign to defend his crown against me or admit he is a phoney title holder."

[illegible] was [illegible] the [illegible] with DeGlane [illegible] than that did not carry any [illegible] of battle. He won two out of three falls.

Dusek [illegible] the first fall in [illegible] m. [illegible] lost the second in 9m [illegible]s and gained the deciding fall [illegible].

Dusek began forcing the issue at the start of the match. He crashed [illegible] quarters snarling and showing his teeth. In close [illegible] punched with both hands to the [illegible]. He got considerable power behind his Dempsey left hook.

After a [illegible] attack of left and right [illegible] punches to the jaw Dusek [illegible] DeGlane with [illegible]. DeGlane expected Dusek would try to repeat [illegible] Henri on the [illegible] with a smashing right hand punch and when the Frenchman dropped to the canvas he pounced on him for the first fall of the match [illegible] to put his [illegible] out of commission. The time of the fall was [illegible].

[illegible] or the [illegible] Dusek made a [illegible] quickly. He cut loose with a wild, reckless [illegible] instead of hitting DeGlane, he crashed to the floor of the Garden.

Ernie was furious when he re[illegible] found [illegible] DeGlane [illegible] crowded [illegible] him around [illegible] under a series of [illegible] punches to the jaw. In an effort to [illegible] further punishment Dusek [illegible] to a neutral corner and [illegible] on the ropes. Henri shot [illegible] to the stomach [illegible] Dusek down for his [illegible].

[illegible] scored with arm locks [illegible] Dusek's head on [illegible] a dozen [illegible]. As the [illegible] of the [illegible] with a [illegible].

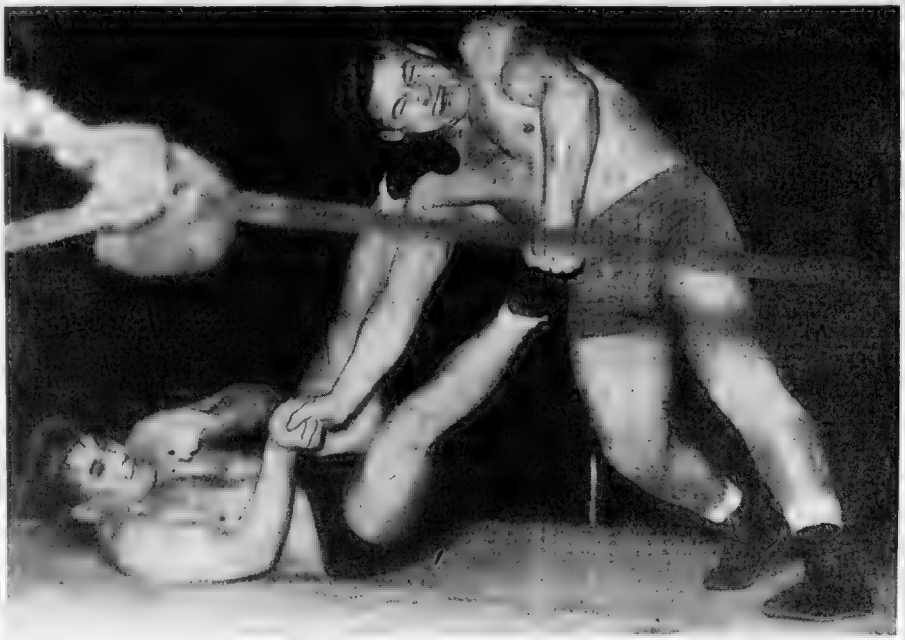
Coin Clicks Again as Dusek Wins

Jack Conway's famous Magic Coin clicked again when Ernie Dusek won from Henri De Glane in their wrestling bout at the Garden as the coin predicted he would. Dusek was on the short end of the betting, and it was expected he would be beaten by the more experienced De Glane.

Dusek Accommodates Crowd: Tries to Tear Off Henri's Arm



DUSEK DEGLANE

"Tear his arm off, and throw it out here," they shrieked at the Garden as Ernie Dusek sailed into Henri DeGlane. Ernie is nothing if not accommodating, as photo reveals. Dusek is known as a "killer" in the wrestling game as Dempsey was in boxing. Ernie stops at nothing to win a match. He wasn't quite successful in his effort to sever Henri's arm from his body. But he was good enough to conquer the former world champion. "Now bring on George," roared the Tiger after the match. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

YALE IS FAVORED OVER TECH IN CREW RACE

Promptly at 4:30 this afternoon, the 150-pound crews of M. I. T., Yale and Cornell will dart forward from their stake boats on Lake Quinsigamond to open the local crew season.

A half hour later the Tech and Yale varsity shells, both with well drilled eights, will get away at the crack of Referee Robbins pistol shot.

Ed Leader of Yale is confident he has the makings of a great boat, while Bill Haines of the Engineer sweep swingers is satisfied his charges are ready for a fast jaunt over the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths.

Varsity lineups

M. I. T.: Bow, Arthur Haskins; 2, Whitney Stueck; 3, John Newbegin, 4, Donald Wood, 5, Edward Loewenstein, 6, Capt. John Westfall, 7, Charles Lucke, stroke, Allan Mowatt; coxswain, Robert Emery.

Yale Varsity: Bow, William Kilbourne, 2, John Pillsbury, 3, James Agen, 4, Henry Allen, 5, John Atwood; 6, Edward Wilson; 7, Benjamin Taylor, stroke, Capt. John Jackson, coxswain, Joseph Holmes.

Annapolis, Md., April 28 (AP)—The choppy Severn River, whipped by a stiff wind all week, was not inviting today for the three-crew regatta of Columbia and Navy.

The starting time of the 150-pound crews at 3 p. m. over the Henley course of 1 5-16 miles depended on the weather. The junior varsity and varsity races, over a mile and half course, were scheduled to follow at half-hour intervals.

In the two latter races Navy outweighed Columbia by about three pounds to a man.

Coaches See Grid Test at H. C.

By Walter Kiley

Spring football is pretty near ready to call it quits until the fall.

Harvard wound up 10 days ago, Holy Cross bids adieu to the Fitton Field gridiron in a regulation game this afternoon, Boston College and Boston University have another week of practice while Dartmouth and other New England colleges are planning to shut up shop in a matter of days.

There will be several college coaches at Dr Eddie Anderson's show at Holy Cross today. While the game will be limited to members of the varsity squad who have been divided into rival camps, the game itself will be played with all the seriousness of fall gridiron warfare.

Among the coaches who are expected to be in the stands are Elie Casey and his Crimson assistant, Wesley Fesler and Adam Walsh, Chick Meehan of Manhattan and Tuss McLaughry of Brown, Dave Morey of Bates, and Pat Healey of Boston University.

The two teams opposing each other have been designated the Eagles and the Crusaders.

The Crusader lineup will be Bob Cutley, Wakefield and Len Avery, Hyde Park, ends; Buzz Harvey, Somerville, and Dave Gavin, Boston Latin, tackles; Phil Flanagan, Canton, and Jim Moran, Dorchester, guards; Tony Morandos, Brockton, center; Tom O'Connor, Springfield, quarterback, Vin Dougherty, Scranton, Len Kuziora, Erie, and Joe Yablonski, Holden, backs.

The Eagles' lineup is to be composed of John O'Donnell, Providence, and Ed Hannoway, Manchester, ends; Hip Moncewicz, Brockton, and Paul Brogan, Lewiston, tackles; Bob O'Brien, Worcester, and Eric Luciano, Somerville, guards; Billy Ryan, center. The backfield will find Tom Coolan and Joe Canini at quarterback; Paul Massey, New Haven, Harry Weindorff, Erie, and Fred Hanlfan, Malden, backs.

Endeavour on Trial Run Next Week

Portsmouth, England, April 28 (AP)—Endeavour, contender for the America's cup, was moved today from the drydock where the last of her launching gear was removed and her hull polished in preparation for the first trial runs next week.

Some delay was encountered due to the necessity for testing the various designs submitted for the novel cut of the foresail. The yacht, owned by T. O. M. Sopwith, British manufacturer, will take part in the races off Newport, R. I., next September.

Tech Freshmen Open at Andover

Two M. I. T. freshman teams will journey to Andover today to open their schedule against Blue and White sports teams.

The freshman tennis team composed of Walter Wejtozak, Willard Roper, G. Gay and C. Hosmer, will meet the prep school racquet swingers. The Tech '37 lacrosse ten will swing into action against the untested Blue and White stickmen.

Golf Links at Barney Ross' Camp

New York, April 28 (AP)—Barney Ross, world's lightweight champion, will train at Ferndale, Sullivan County, N. Y., for his 15-round welterweight title duel with Jimmy McLarnin.

An outdoor ring seating 3000 persons and an indoor ring as well will be erected for the Chicagoan. A nearby golf links will give him a chance to relax from the training grind whenever he so desires. The bout will be held in Madison Square Garden's Long Island bowl, May 28.

TORRANCE PUTS SHOT 55.1½

By Universal Service

Des Moines, Iowa, April 28—Jack Torrance, 275-pound man mountain from Louisiana State College broke the world record in the shot put by an even two feet with a tremendous heave of 55 feet 1½ inches in the preliminaries of Drake University's silver anniversary relay carnival.

Torrance's record put came on his last trial in the preliminaries after he had led the discus qualifiers with a long sail of 150 feet 11 inches.

His toss of the 16-pound ball effaced the old record made in 1932 by Douda of Czecho Slovakia.

Duane Purvis, Purdue's All-American halfback, stayed on the field only long enough to throw the javelin out far enough to lead the field. He competed under trying circumstances, for he had received news that his mother had died.

After standing on his toes for the finals, he made plane and train connections for his home at Mattoon, Ill.

93,000 SEE MANCHESTER CITY WIN ENGLISH FOOTBALL TITLE

KING AND QUEEN WITNESS CLASSIC

London, April 28 (AP)—Before a capacity crowd of 93,000 which included King George, Queen Mary and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Manchester City today defeated Portsmouth 2 to 1 in the final match of the English Football Association cup competition.

S. Rutherford scored for Portsmouth after 27 minutes of the first half but Sammy Tilson booted the tieing score through 15 minutes before the final whistle and Alex Herd, center forward, scored the winning goal just before time ran out.

100 SPECIAL TRAINS

After a foggy morning the sun shone at the start of the game, but before it was over lightning was flashing and the rumble of thunder joined with the roar of the mighty crowd inside and outside Wembly Stadium.

Since early morning 100 special trains had been pouring fans out at the Stadium gates and every seat was filled long before starting time with thousands more massed outside and unable to get in. There were 400,000 applications alone for the 93,000 available seats.

The king and queen arrived half an hour before game time, which was 3 p. m. (10 a. m. E. S. T.) and his majesty got a great cheer from the crowd as he walked on the field and shook hands with the players of both teams. He also presented the cup after the match.

CHEER CRICKET TEAM

The Australian cricket team here for a test series with England also were roundly cheered as they took their places in the stands.

It was the fourth cup final for Manchester City and the second for Portsmouth. The city won in 1904 but lost in 1926 and last year to Everton.

$75,000 Stadium Plan of Somerville Mayor

Somerville High sports teams may perform in a new $75,000 stadium if plans of Mayor James E. Hagen are successful.

Mayor Hagen has sent the board of aldermen a recommendation for a bond issue of $75,000 to cover the cost of construction of a new stadium for school sports on land situated along Alewife brook.

The city owns [illegible] acres [illegible] in the Dilboy Stadium [illegible] and [illegible] the new stadium would be constructed.

The matter of the bond issue has been referred to the finance committee of the board of aldermen. If this committee reports favorably on the measure Mayor Hagan's dream of a modern stadium for Somerville youngsters may become fact.

WAS ATHLETE HIMSELF

Mayor Hagan was a member of [illegible] at Somerville [illegible] little more than a decade back [illegible] school [illegible] sports [illegible] He [illegible] basketball team [illegible] photos.

He believes that the interest in athletics for the city's children should be increased and that a new stadium in place of worn-out Dilboy Field stands would do much to aid sports. The construction also would tend to relieve unemployment.

Some time ago, Mayor Hagan thought it might be possible to have the stadium constructed as a CWA project. The present bond issue is thought to be the best solution of the problem.

CROWDS ON FIELD

The Dilboy stands are worn out and accommodate only limited numbers on one side of the field. At grid games of late years crowds have frequently surged on the field hindering the game and making well run events [illegible] impossible.

Somerville teams in both football and baseball year after year have been ranked with the best school groups under the able coaching of Charley Dickerman. With continued years of such first rate teams, playing in a modern stadium, something of a golden age in Somerville school sports may be [illegible].

[illegible] off [illegible] meeting but [illegible] to get together [illegible] Monday at [illegible] North Brighton. The [illegible] have split in their two games played, beating Charlestown and trailing Jamaica Plain.

"You do know [illegible] conviction. "But [illegible] tell you anyway. That letter said that King Georges [illegible] incognito to Paris [illegible] were rumors [illegible] Olina had been broken off. My father [illegible] before—and that's the reason he wants to separate us. But you know that already [illegible]"

"Yes. I read the same piece you did," Mary said. "Nice little scheme your dad cooked up! I suppose he thinks I'd [illegible] enough to run around with Georges, and set tongues clacking and [illegible] gusted you'd [illegible] ear and [illegible] what [illegible] Mrs. Underwood handed you. Did she scare you into thinking I'd be a 'too-lined' woman if you didn't keep me from going to Paris?"

NOEL FORCES THE PLAY

"She did not!" Noel exploded, if not truthfully, at least convincingly. "She simply wanted me to see the clipping. Do you think I needed her explanation, or anybody's in the world after reading it? Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Heavy, exotic perfumes are annoying to many people. It's much better to select a delicate, elusive perfume and apply just a few drops, than to risk offending others with a "smothering atmosphere."

DRESSES and costumes which fit into the timely scheme of styles but which have little independent expressions of their own are often the sole stunt by which certain women become known as "individual" in their appearance. It's no plague that a clever woman with very scant blessings on the part of nature can outshine her more beautiful sisters if she has captured and subsidized the best hairdresser, the best dressmaker and the best tailor available.

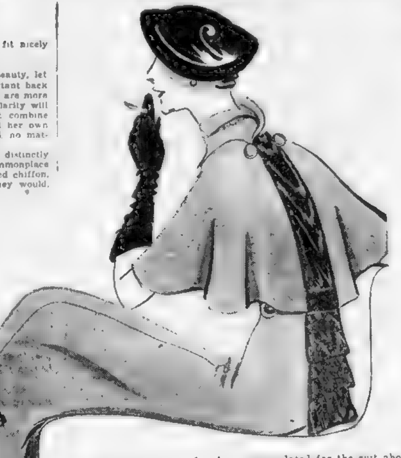
* *

AND the day is past when tons of money and time to search out and employ these "bests" is necessary. Shops that offer them are rife on avenue and side streets; the woman of taste and imagination can find plenty which will fit nicely within her budget.

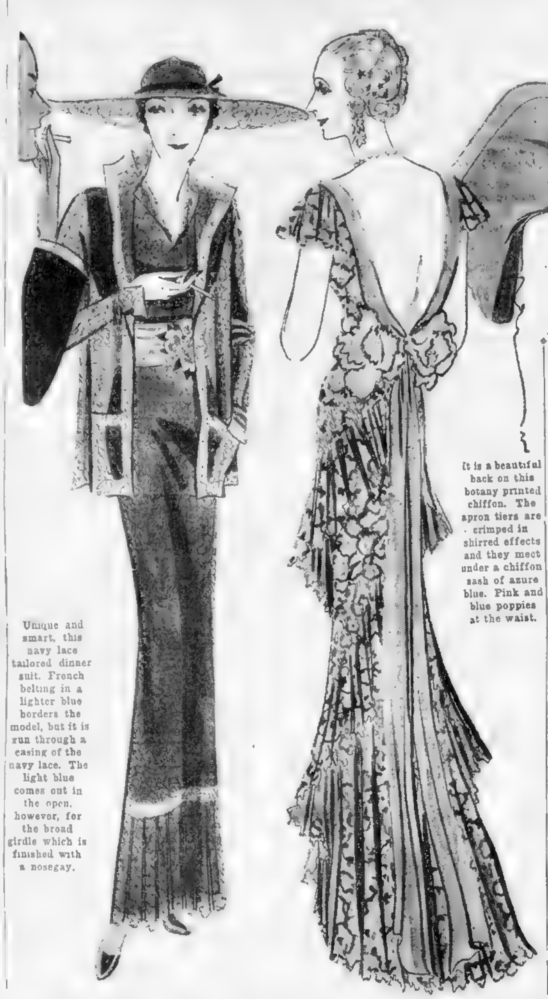
* *

IF it is a woman's back that is her beauty, let her look for the gown with an important back treatment. If the woman whose features are more arresting through intelligence than regularity will keep an eye peeled for costumes that combine unusual fabrics or colors she will hold her own with women more conventionally garbed, no matter how pretty their faces.

The three models sketched below are distinctly individual, although they sound commonplace enough—a lace dinner ensemble, a printed chiffon, and a novelty cotton tailored suit. They would, however, set off the beauty or the wit.



A novelty cotton net has been manipulated for the suit above which should help a woman through lunch, the cafe hour and even the dinner date. Its brown and white threads give a beige effect, and the moire strip over which the cape fastens is a rich brown. So is the suede belt, which has a swell composition buckle in front.



Unique and smart, this navy lace tailored dinner suit. French belting in a lighter blue borders the model, but it is run through a casing of the navy lace. The light blue comes out in the open, however, for the broad girdle which is finished with a nosegay.

It is a beautiful back on this botany printed chiffon. The apron tiers are crimped in shirred effects and they meet under a chiffon sash of azure blue. Pink and blue poppies at the waist.

Plans Surprise Birthday Party for Mother

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to have a surprise birthday party for my mother next month. She will be fifty-one years old. I wanted to have a party for her last year on her fiftieth birthday but I was unable to on account of finances.

My mother is a widow and I would like to know if I should just invite her sisters-in-law and her women friends, or should I invite brothers and husbands as well?

What should I serve?

At what time should I have the party?

What entertainment . . . cards, dance? You see, I want it to be a nice party, for she has never had a party. R.

Bless you for planning this party for your dear mother, who never has had a party given for her. I'm delighted with your plans for giving her this happiness, and I just know how touched and happy she is going to be. You're a fine daughter!

I'd like to have you have the party in the evening, a supper party, with the relatives and friends present, women and men. Plan to have cards for those who wish to play, and music for those who wish to dance . . . and there will be good conversation for those who wish "just to chat."

Make your refreshments very simple so that you and your mother won't get too tired to enjoy the party. I'm sure that each of the sisters-in-law would love making something for the party . . . some rolls that they make especially well, or a luscious chocolate or cocoanut cake or a chocolate cream pie or a lemon meringue pie. Or one might take a decorated birthday cake . . . I do hope you will have a birthday cake for this important party since your mother never has had one. I like to think of her happy eyes as she is cutting it for the guests!

First you might make some delicious sandwiches, with simple fillings, and with these, if you wish, a salad, perhaps a fruit salad with cream sauce. Or a compote of fruits, either fresh or cooked fruits. Then the cake for dessert, with ice cream if you prefer, but that isn't necessary. And hot coffee or chocolate, or a choice of these. And a punch if you wish an alternate of a cold drink.

* * *

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have just recovered from a long illness. I was very ill during the Christmas season. A friend sent me a lovely Old English jar filled with marmalade and wrapped in Christmas decorations and so forth, with a card attached. I am very anxious to do the "exactly right" thing, and this is what I want to know. Should I return the jar or consider it as a gift?

I also received several growing plants in the little ornamental jars. Should I return these jars and bowls or keep them after the flowers are dead? W.

In both of these cases the container is part of the gift, and so you would keep this Old English jar and the bowls in which the plants came.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 N T	2 ♡
4 ♢	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
6 ♢	Pass	7 ♢	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's opening bid of one no-trump is obviously correct, inasmuch as his hand contains no biddable suit, but does have 4½ honor-tricks. East's overcall, not vulnerable, is not to be criticized. Mr. McElroy's jump takeout after his first pass was correct, and his idea was to suggest slam possibilities, provided the four honor-tricks in his partner's hand included a wealth of aces and kings. The response of four hearts, showing control of the adverse suit, was North's answer to this challenge, and when Mr. McElroy bid six diamonds, North decided that the hands should produce all the tricks and therefore bid for the grand slam.

When West opened the Spade Queen it seemed reasonably obvious that he did not hold a heart as there would be no purpose in opening a suit of his own in preference to his partner's if he had no suit stronger than Queen high. The trick was won with the Ace in Dummy and a small spade returned and ruffed. Now Mr. McElroy took three rounds of diamonds, re-entered the Dummy with a heart, and cashed the Ace of hearts. He next led the third round of spades from Dummy, the purpose being to drive out, if possible, the spade King, which appeared to be placed in the East hand. When the King dropped, the successful play of the hand was assured.

The Vienna Coup, by which the heart Queen was established as an apparent winner in the East hand, and the driving out of the spade protection from the same hand made it impossible for either East or West to put up an effective defense. Before the last trump was led, the situation was:

♠ 9

West was forced to retain the spade Knave; hence he dropped the club Ten. The nine of spades had now served its purpose and was discarded. East knew South held the heart Knave; therefore he was compelled to retain the heart Queen and reluctantly dropped the club Knave. Mr. McElroy now triumphantly led his small club and thus fulfilled his Grand Slam contract.

The hand is an interesting one, requiring not only perfect timing but a number of complicated plays.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

I'm that disturbed I could die. Do you think you could help me? You'll probably say I'm making a mountain out of a molehill, as my grandmother does, but I don't care, Pandora, it's got me so I can't sleep any more. I'm beginning to look so haggard and unalluring that it will probably all be settled for me, and I won't have to make a decision.

As I was saying, I just can't make up my mind. I've been going with this man for six years. He's terribly good-looking, has a plumbing business of his own and is well liked by his men friends. There's really nothing the matter with him except this one thing. I know he loves me genuinely, and he's deeply fond of my mother. In fact, he insists that when we are married she must come to live with us—that her presence would but make our home the more charming and delightful. You see, Pandora, he's really a fine man, and there's no one who could say a word against him. That's what makes it so appalling.

It was just the other day I heard about it and I don't dare ask him if it's true because if it isn't it would be just too awful—awful, I mean, for me to have harbored the merest suspicion it was so. Now, could YOU, Pandora, marry a man who wore a toupee? A girl in his office swore on our encyclopedia (my stepfather's sister's boy's badminton instructor borrowed our Bible that she just knows he wears one because the wind blew it over on his far ear one day during dictation. To be in love with a man and find that out about him, oh, it's just too horrible. I'd hate to give up my ring and the darling little apartment, all ready and waiting for us, but I don't see how I can marry a man with a false part. MILLY.

DEAR MILLY:

What could be fairer than this? You agree to give up your drugstore pink cheeks, inch-long eyelashes, ruby-red lips and fingernails, golden-glint rinses and marcels if he'll doff his hirsute top-piece. Scared, Milly? I thought so. He'd probably never recognize you minus the paint-job. In all probability, he'd walk out on you, warbling woefully, "She's not the little girl I wrote the note to." So stop being a smuggie—you'll never get to Heaven that way.

PANDORA.

LOTION OF HONEY AND GRAPES MAGICALLY SOOTHES AND SMOOTHS TIRED EYELIDS

Use Pads With Fragrant Liquid and Ten Minutes Rest for Renewed Freshness

By Carol Ames

YOUR EYES, so sparkling and radiant of a morning—what would you give to keep their soft, veiled beauty lovely throughout the day? The witchery of beautiful eyes must bow to the perils of nerve strain, worry and wrinkles unless you guard them carefully.

Eyes are the most vulnerable point of beauty! Abuse them and they become dull and red-rimmed. Deep circles and puffiness suddenly appear to rob them of loveliness.

You can clip years from your age by watchful care of the eyes. When it comes to wrinkles women don't want them—not even the laughing variety about the eyes. They are like that. The fascination of languorous eyes is at once lost if they are framed in a mirror of tiny, tell-tale lines. It's a matter of common sense, of the plain, everyday variety when it comes to choosing things for your skin and your hair and your hands. But your eyes—that's quite another story.

There has been a great to-do in Paris about the truly miraculous liquid for the eyes which contains of all things grapes, honey and oil. Imagine it! It has a faint grape scent that is reminiscent of the vine clad hills of Italy and is the most soothing lotion imaginable for weary, aching lids.

This liquid works best when heated. It is more readily absorbed. After a day spent under electric lights at the office or an afternoon shopping, an application of this preparation is as refreshing as a June morning.

After heating the liquid soak a number of cotton pads until they are dripping wet. Place them over your closed lids. Relax for at least ten minutes or longer if you can spare the time.

Now for an exceptionally fine eye cream to be gently patted in just before retiring. There is nothing mysterious about wrinkles. They are a sign that your skin is lacking in natural body oils. Hence the only sensible thing to do about them is feed them oil via the cold cream route.

I cannot guarantee that an application of this cream will banish wrinkles, but it will certainly prevent new ones from appearing to ruin the beauty of your eyes. This cream is very rich and easily absorbed and is indispensable if you are an habitual night owl!

Rest the eyes occasionally when reading or working. Use eye exercises to strengthen the muscles. Never read in a dim light or a flickering one. If you'll follow the A. B. C's of eye care your eyes will remain bright and expressive and should be the chiefest of your charms.

Telephone to Carol Ames if you wish to know the name of the honey liquid lotion for the eyes, the new eye cream, and where they may be purchased. Or if you prefer to write, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Embroidering Hints

EMBROIDERING LINENS with the maiden name initials is still being done—although if things are monogrammed sufficiently near to the wedding date it seems hardly a sensible and worthwhile thing. Many people prefer, and quite rightly, to use the last initial of the husband's family name combined with the bride's own Christian name. Thus, Mary Keene Allen marrying William Kennard, the monogram may be either MKA, MAK or MKK.

Answers to Your Beauty Problems

Skin Tonic

Question: When should an astringent or skin tonic be applied to the face? What is the purpose of such preparations?—M. C., Belmont.

Answer: Apply an astringent or skin tonic only after cleansing your skin thoroughly with cleansing cream, or after rinsing soap and water off your skin. Pat on the astringent, and let it dry on your face and neck. Skin tonics and astringents both are intended to close the pores again after the face is cleansed.

* * *

Bath Salts

Question. Do you think borax is good to soften bath water?—Mrs. C. E., Medford.

Answer: I do not advise using borax regularly to soften bath water. It's apt to dry out your skin. Why not use one of the many lovely bath salts or bath oils instead to perfume and gently soften the water?

* * *

Bleach

Question—Some time ago you sent me directions for using a home-made bleach for superfluous hair. How often can this be used on my type of skin? It happens to be rather oily.—W. C., Dorchester.

Answer—Unless your skin is quite dry and easily irritated you can use the superfluous hair bleach you mentioned several times daily. If your skin is dry and inclined to be sensitive, however, I suggest diluting this preparation with a little water. Let it dry on your skin for a few minutes, then wash and rinse off well, and dry your skin. Afterward, pat on a little soothing cold cream, to counteract the drying effect of the bleach.

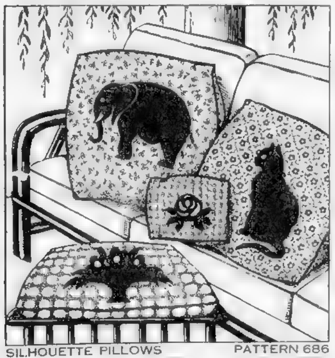
* * *

Nice Nails

Question: I have trouble with soft, brittle nails. What do you suppose causes this condition, and how do you advise correcting it? I am employed as a stenographer, and as soon as my nails grow out to a pretty length snap one goes—and there's another broken nail. I must use a typewriter a great deal of the time, and my finger tips never look nice with at least two or three nails shorter than the rest.—S. H., Roxbury.

Answer: Soft, brittle nails may be due to a run-down physical condition, or not eating the right sort of foods. Be sure to include plenty of milk, eggs, fruit and vegetables in your diet. For local treatment of brittle nails I suggest soaking them in warm olive oil for a few minutes several times weekly. At night rub on a little cuticle oil or nourishing cream and leave it on all night.

Make These in An Hour



SILHOUETTE PILLOWS PATTERN 686

Pillows—that crying need of the home in summer! And they must be gay—and they must be practical—and they must be easy to make. What could be gayer than these simple silhouette pillows—a lucky elephant or cat and decorative flower motifs made of but one big patch of material? It could be felt, linen, gingham or other cotton material. The patch can be appliqued without turning under edges, by slip stitching in the case of felt, or by blanket stitching when other materials are used. The white parts in the silhouette can either be be cut or embroidered. That they are quickly made is obvious for the patches are all so simple in form that it takes no time to apply them.

Pattern 686 comes to you with a transfer pattern of an elephant 8½ x 10 inches, a cat 9½ x 10 inches, a basket 10 x 11 inches and a five inch flower motif, directions for applying the patches and yardage requirements.

Send 10c for this pattern to Boston Evening American, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth ave., New York City.

EYES CALLED VULNERABLE POINT OF BEAUTY

EYES are woman's most vulnerable point of beauty and should be valued accordingly. The eyes of Jean Parker, left, and Mary Carlisle, Hollywood starlets, remind one of still pools and starry, perfumed nights. The care with which these beauties tend their eyes is cold reason—they know the perils of nerve strain, worry and wrinkles which rob the most lovely eyes of charm. Today Carol Ames tells about a truly miraculous liquid from Paris which contains grapes and honey, and is a perfect rejuvenator.

"CHICKIE'S DAUGHTER"---By Elenore Meherin

CHAPTER 69

"Get a few clothes, Pippin. Take as little as possible. A plane is waiting. We're flying to Bakersfield. I've made the arrangement."

Pippin leaned with both hands on the door and stared frightened into her mother's eyes. Her lips were stiff. She could not bring forth the shocking words that formed in her mind.

"But why are we taking a plane?"

"He has asked for you. He is very seriously hurt."

She went blindly to her room, threw a few clothes into a suit case, put on a heavy coat, left a note for Colleen [illegible] and another for Kathleen, then followed her mother to the car.

She slumped in the corner, feeling faint and terribly cold. Suddenly she was sitting bolt upright. A [illegible] made her teeth chatter.

"When did you get this word? Please tell me what you know."

"Bill was conscious when they found him. He asked that David care for him and that you come. Bill's mother phoned from New York and begged your father to go to him. Fortunately he could do it. He has already left."

"And Bill's mother?"

"[illegible] flying here."

"Oh mother! It must be he is dying."

"Never think that! His plane got out of control when he had to fly hard through the storm. He was too low to make a parachute jump, he couldn't gain altitude. Motorists saw his flare, a short time later they heard the crash.

"They found Bill pinned in the wreckage of his plane. He was still conscious."

PIPPIN IS AFRAID

Chickie didn't look into Pippin's face. She did not tell what David [illegible] when the doctor, in charge of the hospital to which Bill was brought, phoned. George Howard, the doctor, had been a student of David's in Medical school.

But Pippin thought, "Dad's there!" And [illegible] down, her whole [illegible] shut with reluctance. She did not want to step [illegible] to meet the [illegible] tragedy which might [illegible].

As they [illegible] Mines Field she [illegible].

"I don't want to go, mother. He [illegible]. If he is dying I don't want to be there, don't want to see it."

She began to weep softly.

"He has asked for you, Pippin. You would surely not refuse. You would [illegible]. You must surely want to help him."

Then her mind leaped forward to meet Bill. Not crushed or injured but a tall swift laughing fellow who [illegible] in the broad daylight as they drove from the parking station in Post Street. A joyous confident fellow whose eyes changed happily. "Is he a better man than I, Pippin?"

This was the Bill Pippin now visualized and the one she would meet.

She stepped into the plane. It was a grey, cold day with an opaque fog over the ocean. But they flew across the valley high above the drifting ceiling of mist and cloud.

Pippin said, "Why are you coming, mother? It seems so strange."

Her mind was numbed with shock and terror. She looked down and saw to the East the mountains [illegible]. They were not majestic purple shadows billowing through an azure heaven now. They were grey spires of desolation impaled on a watery, wind-swept sky.

She found Helena's hand. "I'm so frightened, mother. I won't know what to do."

"Yes, you will."

But she cried softly: "I won't be able to bear it."

SENSE OF UNREALITY

Pippin stood at the bed and gazed at the still figure lying there, lost in remote, unnatural sleep.

She murmured to herself, "Bill!" And kept her eyes on his quiet face. Bill's face. Just as usual with the blonde hair slicked back, the slightly pointed chin with the cleft in the middle and the full, boyish mouth. But the features sharpened, fixed in a clammy pallor. He lay so quiet.

She could not shake off the sense of unreality, the appalling conviction this was a visitation of a dream. A great black shutter dropped over the bright, happy truth. It would be drawn away presently, she would see the real Bill, strong, laughing, happy.

She wondered if he were conscious of her presence; wondered if she should speak to him.

Then his eyelids flickered. His breath came with faint shallow regularity. Very slightly he turned his head. His lips moved.

She thought he said, "Pippin."

She looked about in hurried anguish for help.

David stood at her side. He said, "Tell him you are here."

Pippin leaned down and with her cheek touching his whispered, "Bill! Bill dear, this is Pippin. Do you hear?"

She kissed his forehead and wept.

A faint brightness moved for an instant along his mouth. But he gave no other sign. Yet Pippin, watching, thought he seemed at peace, seemed not so lost in heavy, trance-like stupor.

She was afraid of a blue shadow over his mouth and that his skin had a cold damp look. He kept wetting his lips as though he were parched with thirst. The nurse gave him spoons of liquid.

Pippin sat there and prayed. She said odd, frightened, childlike prayers. "Oh God, make him well! God, lift him out of this!"

LIES IN A DREAM

Bill lay there in a dim dream. Now and again sentences formed in his mind and vanished before he had strength to utter them.

He saw Pippin coming to meet him with jewels in her hair. She laughed and fled away into gray impenetrable mist. But he heard a singing in the dark. It was her voice. He followed it and called again, "Pippin!"

She put her hand in his, repeating, "I'm here, Bill. Do you see me?"

He smiled faintly, or she thought he smiled.

Now it was his mother who came. She appeared suddenly at the door with a warning. "You'd take the southern route. Be careful."

He said aloud, clearly, "Mother."

David, with his finger on Bill's pulse, answered, "She's coming. Your mother will soon be here."

He lapsed down into strangely distorted oblivion. Sharp pictures, all angles, flashed before him and merged grotesquely on other pictures.

He was in the plane whirling through the black chaos of wind and storm. He saw the black ledge of land rising and pulled with both hands on the stick.

He moaned indistinctly. "My legs. look—all blood—can't stop it."

For a long time he lay quiet.

Pippin followed her mother to an adjoining room.

She said harshly, "Are his legs gone, mother?"

"No — they are broken and crushed."

"ALWAYS HOPE"

"They won't take them off? He's not going to be crippled?"

"They will save them of course if possible."

Pippin sank on the bed and covered her face.

Helena said, "Go to bed now. It's late. You will want your strength."

She looked at her mother with dark indignation. But David came in and said simply, "You came here to be of help, Pippin. Get sleep. He won't be aware of your absence."

David looked grim, competent, deadly quiet. She said, brokenly, "You have no hope?"

"Always hope."

That recalled another scene to Chickie. Jake brought into the hospital, all his lordly strength laid low. David said almost that same thing. "Hope!"

Pippin kept awakening. She knew that her mother lay on the bed beside her. Now that Helena was moving with stealthy glide across the room.

She cried sharply, "What has happened?"

"Sleep. There is no change."

* * *

Late Saturday morning with the early May sunlight flooding the room Pippin came starkly awake. The whole horrifying nightmare sharp in her memory. A nurse set a breakfast tray before her.

Helena sat there making her eat. When she looked in her mother's white face she was afraid even to say, "How is he?"

"He is in the operating room. They are giving him more blood."

"Did he lose so much?"

FEARS VANISH

"Yes, a great deal. The main artery in his leg was severed. He is internally injured."

She couldn't ask more. She knew now that Bill was dying. There wasn't any chance. Even David could do no more.

She said with a sob, "Oh Helena, his mother!"

"He is conscious, Pippin. He knows his mother is coming."

"Mother—you mean that he will fight to keep alive?"

"He has great courage. He will fight."

Hours later when Pippin stood again at Bill's bed her fears vanished. He looked better.

The bed was tilted. He kept saying, "Water."

She stooped down. "Bill—[illegible]"

After a moment and with an effort his eyes opened. One hand protruded from the cover. The fingers moved. She took hold of them.

He smiled. "I have that ring."

Diseases of Your Mouth

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

I receive many letters requesting information about "canker sores." This is a disagreeable and annoying disturbance of the lining of the mouth. Usually the disorder is mild in its nature and quickly runs its course. But sometimes the inflammation is so severe as to confine the victim to bed for many days.

The cause is not definitely known, but whatever it is some persons are susceptible to canker sores and others rarely if ever suffer from them. Many believe the condition is due to sensitivity to certain foods. When the offending food substance is discovered and omitted from the diet the sore disappears. The trouble does not reappear unless the offending food is eaten.

Others believe the disturbance is due to a lack of certain vitamins. When the diet is deficient in foods carrying [illegible] membrane of the mouth become inflamed and susceptible to infections. Prolonged lack of the vitamin leads to severe bleeding and tenderness of the gums. This condition can be prevented or overcome by taking an abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables.

The victim of canker sore first notices an inflamed spot, usually located at the base of the teeth, under the tongue, or on the inner surface of the lips or cheeks. Pretty soon there appear small blisters which break, leaving behind a whitish patch and a painful ulcer.

Bear in mind that ulcers within the mouth demand immediate medical attention. It is often the only sign of a serious disease. Persistent ulcer that does not respond to simple medication should arouse suspicion.

For sufferers from simple canker sores I would advise careful supervision of the diet. Try to determine whether you are sensitive to certain foods. Include a liberal supply of fresh fruits and vegetables in your diet. If you have not recently consulted your dentist do so now. [illegible] cavities filled and [illegible] work repaired.

The mouth [illegible] clean by [illegible] and regular brushing of the teeth. The canker sores can be touched with a strong [illegible] few days.

A silver nitrate stick applied to the sore is extremely effective. Care must be exercised in its use as it is a strong chemical and will damage [illegible] if unwisely applied.

Answers to Health Queries

B. M. Q—I have a breaking out of a rash which resembles fine pimples, it is very itchy and seems to dry and scale off before it disappears. What would you advise in this case?

A—This is probably eczema. Watch your diet and elimination. For full particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

I said, "I'll [illegible] bright thought [illegible] hat and coat [illegible] to get hold of [illegible] how would I reach [illegible]?"

He gave me his telephone number, we shook hands and I left.

Gilbert Wynant was waiting for me in the corridor. Neither of us [illegible] we were in a taxicab. Then he asked, "He thinks I was telling the truth, doesn't he?"

"Sure. Weren't you?"

"Into what?"

"Never mind that until we get him fixed up."

"But Cyle was here," she said. "That's why I phoned you."

"What?"

"He was." She nodded vigorously. "And he asked where Gil was. He was here for an hour or more. He hasn't been gone ten minutes."

"All right, let's get him to bed."

Gilbert stubbornly insisted that he needed no help, so I left him in the bedroom with his mother and went out to the telephone.

"Any [illegible]" [illegible] Nora when [illegible] on the line.

"Yes, sir. Mr. [illegible] Macaulay and Guild want you to phone them, and Mr. and Mrs. Jorgensen and Quinn want you to phone them. No children [illegible]."

"When did Guild call?"

"About five minutes ago. Mind [illegible]? Larry asked me to go [illegible] good Perkins [illegible] with him."

"[illegible] See you later."

I [illegible] Herbert Macaulay.

"[illegible] off," he told me. "I [illegible] and he's up to [illegible] know what. Listen, Charles, I'm going to the police. [illegible]"

"[illegible] nothing else to [illegible]," I said. I was thinking [illegible] telephoning some policemen myself. "I'm at Mimi's. He was here a few minutes ago. I just [illegible] him."

The bitter battle over the management of Montgomery Ward is over for the time being at least. The forces of Sewell L. Regardless of the merits of either side the cessation of internal strife should react in the favor of stockholders, who rarely benefit when powerful forces are locked in combat over the management of their company.

BETHLEHEM HAS GAIN IN EXPORT BUSINESS

Substantially Better Second Quarter Expected

New York, April 28—"With the new increase in wages which went into effect on April 1 our costs have risen at a rate of about $450,000 a month," Pres. Grace of Bethlehem Steel Corp. said at annual meeting. He stated that in the first half of 1933 the average hourly earnings of the employes were 51.1 cents. "In 1929 the same figure for the full year was 65.4 cents. The rate which became effective April 1 is 70.3 cents an hour. In other words the present earnings per hour are about 7½ per cent above the 1929 record. The men worked in 1929 at an average of about 52 hours per week. At present the average is 32 to 35 hours a week."

Asked whether he thought consumers were stocking up more steel than they needed, he said:

"I think without a doubt they are buying liberally."

He also said there was little new buying at the higher prices which went into effect recently and there is little likelihood of much new business at the higher prices developing until approach of the third quarter.

"Export business has picked up as compared with six months ago," Mr. Grace continued.

Questioned about Bethlehem's earning prospects for the second quarter Mr. Grace said:

"I certainly would expect the second quarter to be substantially better than the first."

Commenting on the tax situation, Mr. Grace commented:

"I wonder if people generally realize how far-reaching the elimination of consolidated tax returns will be."

He said the employes of Bethlehem Corp. had held their elections in March and 87 per cent of those qualified to vote were in favor of the employe representation plan.

Mr. Grace stated that the outlook for capital goods business is not good because there is no money available under the Securities Act.

Automobile Sales Are Seen at Best Levels in Years

New York, April 28—Considerable irregularity has developed in the retail automobile market trend during the past two weeks. While sales have continued at the best levels since 1931, and far in advance of like period of 1933 and 1932, the recent tone presents the possibility that the seasonal peak in deliveries may have been reached early this month.

In connection with institution of price advances early in April by most leading lines, a substantial bulge in deliveries occurred. According to competent observers a [illegible] part of this spurt was accounted for by many dealers filling as many existing orders as possible from their stock on hand at [illegible] prices.

[illegible] sales [illegible] experienced by many [illegible] during the middle of the month. [illegible] reports on retail sales during the last few days, however, have indicated that an uptrend in deliveries has been resumed in some important instances.

Whether this resumed uptrend will carry far enough to restore the line of advance existing before the irregular movements this month will determine whether April will represent the peak month in the spring selling season or whether earlier anticipation of a later peak will be confirmed.

CAPITAL GOODS INDUSTRIES HELD BACK

An Uncertainty as to Money Is Given as Reason

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, April 28—The plight of the "capital goods" industries keeps coming up for discussion. Sometimes they are called "durable goods," but that is misleading. The real point is that they are durable "capital" goods.

Lewis Haney

This means that they concern the use of buildings and machinery, together with stocks of raw materials. These are all instruments of production. They are not consumers' goods, but are things which are used to produce consumers' goods.

Capital goods require the tying up of uninvested funds in various kinds of building and machinery ("plant and equipment"), which are not wanted for themselves, but are wanted only for the consumers' goods they help produce.

Why are the Capital goods industries backward with much unemployed?

Here are exactly two reasons, and no more.

1. One is the continued uncertainty as to money. Lacking a definite monetary standard, no one knows what any fixed sum of money will be worth five years from now, nor what any fixed interest payments will be worth meanwhile. So no one wants to tie his money up in an investment in fixed capital (plant and equipment).

2—The other reason is the great uncertainty as to net earnings available for invested capital. This condition is partly due to uncertainty as to sales and partly due to uncertainty as to how much of the total sales will be left for capital.

No investor can know the trend of prices nor the results of numerous changing restrictions on business. But if he could, he would still be in the dark when trying to figure how much of the earnings would go to labor and how much to the government as taxes.

These are the reasons why capital goods industries are depressed and do not draw investment funds.

If prospective investors could be as sure as usual that, when their funds get tied up in plant and equipment, these capital goods could be reasonably free to earn, and that high wages and taxes would not absorb the earning, there would be no lack of investment.

The much discussed Securities Act is at most but a minor factor. If monetary stability existed, and earnings were in sight, funds would be plentiful.

One market letter says, "Now that the bond market has achieved a [illegible] table to launching new issues, there remains only the decision to permit a private long-term capital market to function." That is bunk. There is no question of some mere law or "decision." The great problem is to free invested capital from the uncertainties and unreasonable burdens imposed by the new deal and NRA.

For example, another writer says, "The railroads will be unable to contribute immediately to recovery if their net earnings are curtailed by premature increases in their payrolls." That is more to the point.

The same persons who have wanted "open market operations" and huge excess bank reserves, now fancy that, by setting up lending arrangements for "intermediate credits," they can force credit into business.

That is like shouting "Buy Now" to consumers. I will do no good until a basis for confidence in invested capital is restored. That will require: (1) Sound money, (2) reasonable wages, (3) reasonable taxes, and (4) a square deal for all the elements in business.

Hudson Motor Car Loss Is Reduced

New York, April 28—Hudson Motor Car Co. reports for quarter ended March 31, 1934, net loss of $802,815 after depreciation, taxes and other deductions, against net loss of $1,491,005 in first quarter of 1933.

Officials state that the delay in production early in the year, due to labor troubles in the automobile industry, was responsible for the first quarter's loss. March operations showed a profit.

Shipments of Hudson and Terraplane cars have now reached several thousand more than total production last year and are continuing at a high rate.

STOCK PRICES ARE HEAVY AT CLOSE

Nek York, April 28—Stocks were heavy at the close of today's short session of trading on the New York Exchange. The list was featureless up until the last few minutes when a burst of selling sent leaders down fractions to around 2 points. Motor shares were easier while a few metals were firm.

The "American Banker" reports the opening of 45 banks in the past week as compared with 32 the week before. Total opening for the first four weeks of April were 196, the largest number for any month since March, 1933.

March gross revenue of New York Telephone Co., largest operating unit of the Bell System, was $15,807,986 against 15,148,170 a year ago. Net operating income of 3,-52,695 compares with $2,531,279.

Stocks were generally steady in dull trading in the first hour. Changes were largely limited to a narrow range. American Bank Note and Beech-Nut Packing were down a point or more. Softness of the Bank Note shares was attributed to the poor report of the company just issued.

Colorado & Southern dropped more than a point. Industrial Rayon was under pressure, sliding back a point. Hudson and Motor Wheel were down around a point each. Motor Products eased fractionally.

American Sugar, Brunswick-Balke-Collander, American Can, Mengel, Schenly Distillers and United Drug were at moderately higher levels. Procter & Gamble and People's Drug were more than a point higher.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 220,000 shares.

With automobile production apparently around its seasonal park, and some factories expected to start laying off workers next week, the major steel companies were looking to railroad equipment buying and public works activities to take up the slack which will be left by receding motor orders.

The American Railway Association reported that, on April 1, class 1 railroads of the country had 6512 new freight cars on order compared with 1873 on the same day last year. At the same time the roads had 21 new steam locomotives and 25 new electric engines on order against 3 on April 1, 1933. The steel companies believe that these orders will be expanded substantially when the transportation systems accomplish much-needed financing.

It was expected in financial quarters that the NRA stel code, which expires May 31, will be extended but that there will be a number of revisions recommended to President Roosevelt. Officials of the American Iron & Steel Institute and Donald K. Hichberg, general counsel for the NRA, have agreed to make a survey of the code to ascertain the changes, if any, that should be made.

The administration, it was said, feels that the trial period has not ben long enough to determine the succes or failure of the code.

Only slight changes were shown by foreign currencies. The British pound was off ¼ of a cent at $5.14⅜, and the French franc was a trifle lower at 6.64½ cents.

Gas of Baltimore Revenue Gains

Consolidated Gas Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore for quarter ended March 31, 1934, reports gross operating revenue of $7,840,-169, against $7,298,980 for same period last year. Net income available for dividends and general corporate uses amounted to $1,707,-451, which, after deducting preferred dividends, was equal to $1.21 per share on 1,167,397 common shares outstanding. In the first three months of 1933 net income was $1,510,765, which, after deducting preferred dividends, was equal to $1.05 per share on same number of common shares.

MacAndrews Co. Profit $243,672

New York, April 28—MacAndrews & Forbes Co. report for quarter ended March 31, 1934, net profit of $243,672 after all expenses and federal taxes, equivalent after dividend requirements on 6 per cent preferred stock, to 70 cents a share on 303,894 shares of common stock, excluding shares in treasury. This compares with $158,649, or 42 cents a common share a year before.

Hupp Motor Car Report Is Issued

Detroit, April 28—Hupp Motor Car Corp. reports, for quarter ended March 31, 1934, net loss of $742,-526 after charges and depreciation, against loss of $522,997 in first quarter of 1933.

Wool Market Reaction Is of Modest Proportions

For the first time since the big advance in raw wool prices began just over a year ago, the Boston market has experienced a definite set-back. In comparison with the previous advance, the reaction has been of modest proportions.

Currently the market is softer in Ohio and other eastern wools than it is in the western or territory types. In some quarters this situation is attributed to the firm price policy of the Wool & Mohair Advisory Committee. The body must pass on all prices at which dealers holding government-financed wool proposed to sell any of their staple. More western than eastern wool has been financed by the government, and on the former the committee is not, according to the trade, approving prices showing declines equal to those on eastern wools.

Currently fine Ohio delaine is quoted at 84-86 cents, scoured, as against the peak of 86-89; eastern three-eighths blood, strictly combing, is 70-73 against 78-81, and eastern quarter-bloods 64-66 cents against 70-72 cents. In the western wools, the finest grades are now 84-86 cents against peak of 86-88; three-eighths blood 78-80 against 80-83 and quarter-bloods 71-73 against 72-74.

Prices have also eased in the growing regions. In the West the new wools are just about on a parity, on a delivered basis, with old wools in Boston, but eastern wools are below the comparable Boston level.

Wool tops, or semi-finished yarns, have been sharply lower this week. The May delivery has declined to 92 cents from 97 cents last Saturday. Boston spots have not, however, been quite so soft, as the choice oil combed grade is still $1.10-$1.12, against $1.12-$1.13 a week ago, and a peak of $1.14. Topmakers have been delivering more tops than they have been selling or producing, a situation making for a stronger statistical position.

Houston Oil Co. Is Showing Profit

Baltimore, April 28—Report of Houston Oil Co. of Texas and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Houston Pipe Line Co., for quarter ended March 31, 1934, shows consolidated net profit of $175,607 after interest, depreciation, depletion, abandoned leases, federal taxes, etc., equivalent after quarterly dividend requirements on 357,904 shares of 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock, to three cents a short on 1,098,618 shares of common stock. This compares with net loss of $355,294 in first quarter of 1933.

Southern Chemical Corp. Formed

New York, April 28—American Cyanamid Co. and Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., ointly, have formed the Southern Chemical Corp., with Delaware charter, and have qualified to do business in Texas. New corporation will produce a varied line of chemicals in connection with the operation of the alkali plant being constructed at Corpus Christie, Texas, by Southern Alkali Corp., also jointly owned by the two above-mentioned companies. It is expected the plant at Corpus Christie will be in operation this fall.

Eastern Utilities Dividend

Eastern Utilities Associates declared usual quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share on the common stock, payable May 15 to stock of record May 7.

American Bank Note Shows Loss

American Bank Note Co. reports for the quarter ended Mar. 31, 1934 net loss of $188,545 after all charges, including depreciation, against a net loss a year ago of $42,355. For the quarter, operations of the British and Canadian subsidiary companies are stated at $4.80 to the £ and par of exchange, respectively. The first quarter operations for 1933 were stated at rates of exchange prevailing during that period.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST CRIME BY RADIO TO OPEN ON STATION WEEI TONIGHT AT 10:30

Bar Association Launches Air Crusade

By N. F. T.

Four special and timely broadcasts have just been negotiated by the American Bar Association. The significant series is labeled "Coping With Crime" and is set for regular Saturday night airings. The first turn is announced for tonight (WEEI) between 10:30 and 11 o'clock. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings is the principal speaker holding forth to wage the broadcasting crusade, speaking one week from this evening. Tonight the air audience hears from Earl W. Evans, president of the American Bar Association.

* * *

STRONG SPEAKER

Mr. Evans will inauguarte the carefully contemplated campaign against lawless depredation. He airs an address he chooses to call "Meeting the Lawyer's Responsibility to Improve Criminal Justice" which is slated to occupy border to border wireless waves during the aforementioned time.

* * *

Yankee Network facilities will carry (WAAB) the testimonial dinner doings for Maurice Tobin, chairman of the Boston school committee. These festivities are taking place in the Hotel Statler tonight. Broadcasting arrangements have been made to air the get-together from 8:30 until 9 o'clock.

* * *

COOK COMES BACK

Joe Cook, absolutely an artist above par where this more or less critical "colyum" conductor is concerned, gets the popular demand call-back to be master of ceremonies again tonight for the "House Party" program (WEEI) at 9 o'clock. In fact, your striving to be backward broadcasting scribe here might well have predicted the recall after Joe did his job last week. However, it's much more gratifying to just rejoice in the realization that the Joe Cook brand of comedy is appreciated adequately.

Tomorrow evening (WNAC) the "Family Theater" feature second [illegible]t (WNAC) attraction promises a presentation of Edith Barrett noted stage star, in a "Polly the Circus" impression. Me[illegible] at 7:30 p. m.

Gallagher Calls Street Dangerous

Rep. Owen Gallagher, in a letter today to Mayor Mansfield, brought to the later's attention what he termed a dangerous condition in Southampton st., from Andrew sq. to Albany st.

Pot-holes, a foot deep in mud and dirt, make it extremely hazardous for thousands of pedestrians, who are forced to use this route daily on visits to the City Hospital, he decalerd. Gallagher asks the mayor to order the street put in proper repair.

A CORRECTION

In several of our recent advertisements we stated that the price of Crawford Clothes would be increased from $18.75 to $21 on March 10th, and later extended the date of increase to March 24th, urging the public to purchase before the increase in price became effective.

NO INCREASES WERE MADE AS ADVERTISED

Inadvertently our Boston store has been displaying price tickets advertising "Clearance Sale $18.75—Temporarily Reduced."

The purpose of this advertisement is to correct these statements in the aforementioned advertisements.

American Bar Association Document Exposes Dangers of League Court Membership

AT the recent hearing before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations the die-hard advocates of our joining the World Court referred with much flourish to the resolution of the American Bar Association endorsing the Court.

A former officer of the Association acted as a sort of ringmaster of the hearing and presented the names of the speakers. This was not perhaps without its value as window dressing, but it was no more than window dressing, for no action hitherto taken by the Association nor its resolution indicate that the questions involved have received close examination or are based upon even a respectable understanding of them.

And it cannot apparently be inferred that the members of the Association at large accept either the resolution or the spokesmen on this occasion as representative of the Association's opinion.

* * *

IN a recent number of the American Bar Association Journal, the official organ of the Association, no less a person than John W. Davis, a former President of the Association, referred not only critically but skeptically, to the assumption of the American Bar Association "to speak as the voice of a continental bar."

"Can this be said to be its stature," Mr. Davis continues, "so long as the repository of supreme power and the organ of ultimate expression is merely an annual mass meeting; and a mass meeting, too, whose preponderant members are drawn from the membership nearest in mileage to the point of assembly? . . . A viva voce vote in such a gathering on important questions can only be treated as a fair expression on the somewhat violent assumption that lawyers and the opinions of lawyers are alike the country over."

He dismisses the pretension of the Association, as at present organized, to be fairly representative of every class or section of professional opinion, and says "ITS CLAIM TO DO SO IS MERE USURPATION."

* * *

AS if this were not enough to dispose of the American Bar Association as a witness for the Court, the same issue of its official journal contains a scholarly and exhaustive discussion of our proposed accession to the Court which demonstrates in the most convincing way that the instruments now awaiting ratification by the Senate are full of doubt and uncertainty as to their meaning. Many undesirable, not to say dangerous, questions as to the status of the United States will remain unsolved should the Senate act upon the record in its present confusion.

The author of this article is Hamilton Vreeland, Jr., Professor of Law in the Catholic University of America. He is not unfriendly to the idea of a world court, with its promise of substituting peaceful adjudication for arms as a means of liquidating international controversy. But he faces the facts and is not deceived by the distortions which the World Court advocates have given to the conditions laid down by the Court for American adherence.

Realizing that the majority of our people are opposed to the entry of the United States into the League of Nations, he calls attention to the fact that the Permanent Court of International Justice—the so-called WORLD COURT—is INTIMATELY IDENTIFIED WITH THE LEAGUE.

* * *

OF this let no one have any doubt. The Court is established pursuant to Article 14 of the Covenant of the League of Nations. It is connected with the Treaty of Versailles in Articles 415 to 420, inclusive, and 423 of Part XIII. The Covenant is connected with the Treaty of Versailles in approximately seventy Articles of that Treaty.

"Concededly," says Professor Vreeland, "the Court may be called upon to determine questions arising therefrom."

But it is on the Senate's Fifth Reservation that his analysis is particularly illuminating.

This Reservation provided "that the Court shall not render any advisory opinion except publicly after due notice to all States adhering to the Court . . . NOR SHALL IT, WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THE UNITED STATES, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest."

Citing the discussion of this Reservation when it was debated at the conference of States, he makes it perfectly clear that the vital SENATE RESERVATION NO. 5 HAS GONE BY THE BOARD!

To a student of the documentary record it is only too apparent that the Court MAY, if it wishes, render an advisory opinion, even one touching a dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest, WITH OR WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THE UNITED STATES. And furthermore, that the withdrawal from the Court by the United States —notwithstanding all the palaver indulged in by the committee of jurists to the effect that such withdrawal shall be without imputation of unfriendliness—DOES NOT HALT OR PREVENT the Court FROM RENDERING JUST THE TYPE OF OPINION which the SENATE'S RESERVATION NO. 5 WAS DESIGNED TO AVOID!

* * *

THE Senate has before it three treaties—the original Treaty of December 16, 1920, constituting the Court; the Treaty of 1929 amending the original Treaty, and the Treaty or Protocol of Accession of September 14, 1929. All three treaties must be ratified if we are to join the Court.

The last-named treaty provides for withdrawal by the United States, but without preventing the Court from delivering an advisory opinion, should it wish to, against our protest.

This right of withdrawal, however, does not apply to the first two treaties—the Court Statute and the Treaty of Amendment.

There is no provision in either of these two treaties for termination or withdrawal.

* * *

LET the Senate take warning in due time of THIS EQUIVOCAL AND HIGHLY DANGEROUS SITUATION!

Let it heed the warning of this qualified and learned expert, Professor Vreeland:

"IN VIEW OF THE INTIMATE RELATIONSHIP OF THE COURT AND THE LEAGUE . . . and further, in view of the possibility that in the future the independence of the Court may be impaired through the influence of other political and legal philosophies, the accession by the United States to the Court should be accomplished by an instrument WHOSE LANGUAGE LEAVES ABSOLUTELY NO DOUBT that such ADHERENCE can be TERMINATED AT WILL, as a matter of unquestioned and unquestionable RIGHT ON THE PART OF THE UNITED STATES."

Farmers Must Unite

The New England farmers must co-operate.

They must market their goods together.

They must thereby decrease the distribution costs, "which hang like a millstone around their neck."

Harry R. Lewis is speaking. He is the Commissioner of Agriculture for Rhode Island. He is chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the New England Council. He is right.

Times almost without number the Boston Evening American has warned the farmers they must adopt the co-operative policies so wisely established by the California fruit growers, for example, and the Wisconsin dairy interests, for example, if the yare to find the most adequate markets and most advantageous prices for their crops.

We can grow the best apples on this Continent. Our Aroostook potatoes are without a peer. As soon as we learn to sort, grade and market these and other products we will make them attractive to purchasers everywhere and will profit from our co-operation.

E-Governor Gardiner of Maine once said to the Boston Evening American he was "sick and tired" of picking up a menu in a dining car while riding through the Pine Tree State to find only "Baked Idaho Potatoes" boldly listed upon it.

The answer to it is this: The farmers must pol their interests. They have got to market and advertise their products collectively. They have boasted of their "rugged individualism" too long. They are members of a great industry which can best thrive and bring profits to themselves through united action.

Music Lovers Rejoice

Ernest B. Dane of Brookline, with fine generosity, has contributed $100,000 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra and thereby has relieved the financial arrears which have hung over this institution.

Let us say it with pride and let us say it because it is the fact that Boston Symphony Orchestra is the outstanding instrumental assembly in the world today.

Dr. Koussevitzky and his musicians have brought added lustre to the reputation of Boston. And he has not sought to confine the appreciation of good music to those of our people who can afford to be patrons of the Symphony concerts.

Dr. Koussevitzky has long nourished the idea of Sunday afternoon concerts to which the public would be admitted by the payment of a moderate or small fee. Let us hope that the directors will permit him to establish this departure next season.

As a consequence of it, larger numbers of our people who know and really enjoy fine music would share in its delights. And gentlemen of Mr. Dane's generosity would not be required to contribute so handsomely to the annual deficit.

Boom for Fort Devens

Citizens of Worcester and Middlesex Counties have formed an association to stimulate public interest in Fort Devens at Ayer. And they have decided to ask the National government for an appropriation of $3,000,000 to develop and enlarge this military cantonment.

They are to be complimented for their civic pride. And they are to be complimented in their national pride, because Fort Devens is one of the important military establishments upon which the safety of this Nation may depend in a serious emergency.

Apart from its value as a military base, Fort Devens has other assets to Massachusetts and the Nation. Our young men go there in the summer months to derive training in the military arts, to learn discipline and to improve their bodily health. Surely they develop the moral, intellectual and physical advantages which make them better and more valuable citizens. For these reasons, we should hope that the citizens of Worcester and Middlesex Counties may have success in the reasonable requests they make of the National government.

Listen, World!

Elsie Robinson

I didn't know it, but I had become a wet blanket! A careless bit of chatter between two youngsters wised me up.

Elsie Robinson

"Look out," said one to the other, "here comes Gloomy!"

I couldn't believe my ears. "Gloomy"? I, who had always been the life of the party? It was a cruel lie!

So at once I did what most of us would do at first when we hear criticism — felt frightfully sorry for myself! Sat down and cried, and thought of all the Wonderful Things I'd done for everybody. And how Brave, and Hardworking, and Unselfish I'd always been. And how hard I studied and worked—and how much smarter I was than the mean little chits who were criticizing me!

Thus, on and on, until I worked myself into a regular lather of self-pity over my Poor, Dear, Wonderful, Misunderstood Soul. And then, just as I reached the peak of my ravings, something inside me went "bliff!" And I began to wonder.

Was it, maybe, true? Yes, it was! I'd grown to be a pain-in-the-neck to myself as well as everyone else. Once upon a time life had been a big bang. I'd gotten as excited over cooking a new dish, or buying a $2.49 hat, as if I'd been going to China. And I'd made other people excited, too—drabber humans who couldn't get thrilled on their own.

But lately—why, I was about as zippy as a last year's waffle! Well, didn't I have a right to be dull if I wanted to be? Or did I? Was, or wasn't, enthusiasm A DUTY?

Suddenly I saw that it was. But how rarely we think of it that way. Enthusiasm? That's something like having brown eyes and small ankles. Either you have them, or you haven't. And if you haven't, what can you do about it?

That's our popular notion about enthusiasm—but it's wrong. FOR WE BOTH CAN AND SHOULD DO PLENTY ABOUT ENTHUSIASM. WE CAN NOT ONLY CONTROL IT, BUT WE CAN CREATE IT.

Enthusiasm needn't be a passing mood. It can be . . . it should be . . . A DELIBERATELY ACQUIRED VIRTUE. We can be enthusiastic if we wish, just as we can be neat, polite, industrious, honest, punctual.

Nor does this imply the horrid, Pollyanna cheerfulness . . . than which nothing could be more fakey or depressing. We not only can ACT enthusiastic but we can FEEL it.

Just as we can see what we want to see in life, so we can FEEL WHAT WE WANT TO FEEL. There may be a score of reasons for dullness and discouragement in your immediate situation, yet, if you'll set your mind to it, you'll also find twice that many reasons for enthusiasm. The picturesque alley, the enticing wood trail, the intriguing stranger that set you thrilling yesterday, are just as picturesque, enticing and intriguing today. IF THE WORLD HAS TURNED DULL AND DREARY, THE FAULT LIES IN YOU.

And you've no right to let your mind turn dreary. Cheerfulness isn't just a personal treat to yourself, or a favor you're showing the other fellow. It's an obligation you owe!

This modern world, whose convenience you enjoy, was built by the deliberate, often desperate enthusiasm of countless weary, worried, hard-working humans. In the face of incredible obstacles they insisted on remaining interested, hopeful and excited.

You're a pretty poor heel if you can't work up a little steam yourself, in the face of a record like that.

Defense Foes

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Congress is under increasing presure from organized agitators for unpreparedness to abandon our traditional foreign policy and further weaken our national defense.

These agitators have adopted what they call a "Foreign Policy Program," which includes the following mischief-making proposals:

Entrance of the United States into the League of Nations through its back door, by the immediate ratification of the League Court protocols.

MUNITIONS PROBED

Proclamation by the Roosevelt Administration of the terms on which it would be wiling to take the United States into the front door of the League by accepting memberships in all departments of the League.

Investigation of the munitions industry in this country, presumably for the purpose of popularizing the French scheme to make this country wholly dependent in peace time upon government manufacture of arms and munitions of war.

Adoption by the Congress of an arms embargo resolution, which would in effect give power to the President to make war without awaiting a declaration of war by Congress.

REPUDIATED AT POLLS

Abandonment of any further naval construction until after the next naval conference on the limitation and reduction of armament, in spite of the fact that our navy has sunk to third place among the navies of the world and our army to seventeenth place among the armies of the world.

Entanglements of the United States in an European-made treaty that would further reduce our military air force and subject all American aviation—commerical, naval and military—to foreign supervision and control.

By failing to appropriate for the upbuilding of the navy to equality with the strongest, as we are pledged by treaty to do, Congress is aiding and abetting this anti-American program of unprepardness.

By refusing to build up our army to the strength authorized by the National Defense act, Congress is aiding and abetting this sapping expedition to undermine out national defense.

By adopting a fatuous resolution to investigate what is left of our munitions industry, by threatening to take up and ratify the League Court protocols, the Senate is encouraging these agitators of unpreparedness to press their campaign to abandon our traditional foreign policy and further cripple our defense establishment.

The American people have repeatedly repudiated at the polls all proposals to take the United States into the League of Nations through the front-door of its covenant or the back-door of its court.

They have voted overwhelmingly time and again for the building of a Navy equal to the strongest and the maintenance of an army competent to perform its missions of defense as fixed by the National Defense Act.

They have gone on record in election after election in support of an aviation program that would make the United States supreme in the air.

They have opposed, under both Democratic and Republican administrations and Congresses, all schemes for foreign interference in the ordering of our national defense.

FAITH IN WASHINGTON

They have given emphatic approval to the expansion of the reserve oficers' training corps, the citizens' military training camps and the other units of the organized reserves.

They have declared year after year their faith in the wisdom of George Washington's maxim that "to be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

These popular mandates the present Congress will flout if it continues to surrender to the organized pressure of agitators of unpreparedness who are striving to cripple our national defense and to scrap the traditional foreign policy bequeathed to his people by the Father of his country in the farewell address.

WALKING WITH JANET

You who pass life's marvels by
With never a raising of the eye,
May think there's nothing strange or new
Or beautiful in town to view.
Beset with heartaches or with cares
Or busy with your own affairs
'Tis possible you've grown inclined
To gaze at splendors, partly blind,
And think as duties stern you face
The world is dull and commonplace.
If this is now your point of view
You need a child to walk with you.

When I with Janet visit town
And walk the big streets up and down
She pulls me here and hauls me there
To gaze at treasures wondrous rare.
At charms I've missed for many a day
In admiration I must stay.
I would have said there could not be
So much in all this world to see
As Janet finds to praise and please.
I'll swear on every side she sees
Of lovely things an endless list
Which in my blindness I'd have missed.

With Ohs! and Ahs! of real delight
She drags me to the left and right,
And everywhere she looks around
Another miracle is found.
To her the world is beautiful
And never dismal, drab or dull.
She races here and races there
To find enchantments everywhere,
And oft unto myself I say:
"Would I could walk the world this way
And always find and never tire
So much of beauty to admire.

Human Side of the News; New Yukon Gold Rush

By Edwin C. Hill

"This is the law of the Yukon and ever she makes it plain: Send not your foolish and feeble, send me your strong and sane."

These lines of Robert W. Service and the phantoms of his Dan McGrew, his Sam McGee and his Lady who was known as Lou, leap to mind as the news comes from Seattle and Vancouver of steamers crowded to the gunwhales with mining men and prospectors, heading north for Alaska and the Yukon territory, lured to the gold fields by that magic price of $35 an ounce.

Our adventures, the sourdoughs of 1934, are leaving with hopes high, with bands playing and with crowds at the piers to [illegible] them off. A few may make fortunes. The many will come back with less than they take.

But none will face the danger, the privation, the starvation, the disease and the spectre of death which traveled side by side with those 30,000 who came in 1897 and 1898 from the four corners of the earth to know the terrors of Chilkoot Pass and the sufferings of an Arctic winter.

AIRPLANES AND AUTOS

Today paddlewheelers churn a regular service on the Yukon River, and the White Pass and Yukon railway puffs its way along the bluffs and over the ravines, a route which parallels the trail of '98 from Skagway to White Horse. The airplane is omnipresent, and here and there the motorcar is usable, whereas in the historic rush it was only the tramp, tramp, tramp of hobnailed boots along one beaten path.

Nowadays the journey, when made for pleasure and not for gold, is a delight. The trim steamers of the North Pacific run up to Skagway, an inland passage along 1000 miles of the coast of British Columbia and Alaska. And Skagway is no longer the collection of shacks and saloons of 35 years ago with Soapy Smith and his gang of thugs. Rather, it is a busy little city and the terminus of the railroad.

Another 110 miles by train to White Horse, at the headwaters of the Yukon, and then it is four hundred and sixty miles by the paddlewheeler to Dawson and the Klondike.

BONANZA CREEK

The scenery is gorgeous, and the train and boat ride a thrilling experience. There we find Bonanza Creek, where one day in 1896, George Carmack, a trapper and trader from California, with Robert Henderson and two Indians, Tagish Charlie and Skookum Jim, made the strike which was heard around the world. Carmack died a dozen years ago in Seattle, leaving $175,000 and considerable mining property.

Dawson City was built in a day, a roistering place of 30,000 men and women of all races and all manner of morals. The population now is hardly 5000, but order and modernization have supplanted Lynch law and timber huts. A few of the old-timers remain, men gray and bent, still dreaming of discovering the great lost lode. And out in the Klondike fields the machinery of the mining companies digs for the yellow metal.

Down here, scattered through our 48 states, are thousands of the survivors of the Klondike rush. They have their own club, The International Association of Sourdoughs, and their conventions are something to be remembered.

SOLD IN A DAY

Working about the grounds of the Masonic Home for the Aged at Forth Worth, Texas, is one Peter Kern, who, three decades and a half ago, was entertaining in his large cabin on the Yukon as Klondike Pete, the diamond merchant. Kern, in Chicago in 1897, put all his $12,000 into diamonds and took the stones to the Klondike.

"All the men were broke," as he tells the story. "The women had all the gold and how they did like diamonds. Why, man alive. I sold all thoses tones the very first day."

In no time he was the leading merchant of Skagway, with its 165 saloons and sinful population. A clairvoyant steered Pete away from Alaska and down to El Paso, where business reversals dissipated his fortune.

Talking about women: It is the eve of Christmas, 1900, in the dance hall known as the Savoy Theater in Dawson. Doing her turn on the stage is Klondike Kate, queen of the Yukon. Out in the audience sits John Matson, a miner just in from the digginge. One look at Kate and Matson loses his heart. But who was he to woo a queen? He kept his secret locked in his breast and went back to his claim. Kate came south with Alexander Pantages to give that gentleman his start in the theatrical world.

BACK TO KLONDIKE

The years rolled by and Kate had gone to homesteading in Oregon. In August, 1929, the sourdough convention was held in Seattle. Kate Rockwood attended and the news of her presence was carried in the newspapers up to Matson's creek, 100 miles above Dawson. John Matson took his pen in hand and for four years they corresponded, until John had the boldness to write: "Will you marry me? I want to take care of you and make you happy."

And so they were married on July 14, 1933, by the Rev. George Pringle, himself, the sky pilot of the hoaring Klondike during the gold rush. Kate and John are back now in the familiar scenes of that North to which thousands are flocking—to that North where: "This is the law of the Yukon, that only the strong shall thrive, that surely the weak shall perish and only the fit survive."
